PERCY FROST KILLS HIMSELF

INTER-CITY DRY SQUAD WAR ENDS IN TRAGEDY AS MAN TAKES POISON

STORM OF INDIGNATION AGAINST TACTICS OF OUTSIDERS SWEEPS CITY

Grewsome Climax Marks Week of Raids in Which Steubenville Detectives, Working for 10 Per Cent of Fines Assessed in Liquor Law Cases, Played Conspicuous Roles.

As a result of worry over his arrest by Wellsville police on a charge of illegally possessing liquor in the inter-city prohibition officers' war, Percy Thomas Frost, 64, local representative for the Hanovia Chemical company, Newark, N. J., color importers, committed suicide by drinking a quantity of chloroform at his home, 163 Pennsylvania avenue, at 2 o'clock this morning.

Physicians attribute his death to paralysis of the heart, caused by the poison.

Since his arrest last Wednesday afternoon, when a Wellsville squad, under orders of Chief of Police John Fultz, seized six bottles of home brew at his home, Frost has appeared to be in a dejected frame of mind. He was taken before Mayor James Barnes of Wellsville, following his arrest, and fined $1,000 and costs, which Wellsville police claim he made arrangements to pay.

When Frost retired last night, members of his family say he appeared to be greatly concerned because of the notoriety connected with his arrest. About 1:30 o'clock this morning, his wife, who has been ill for the last several weeks and was occupying an adjoining room, hear moans from her husband's chamber and arose to investigate. She found her husband unconscious in bed.

Mrs. Frost's efforts to arouse him failed. She succeeded in dragging him from the bed to the floor, and then ran from the house and screamed for neighbors, who reached the home within a few minutes.

Leaves Two Notes.

Dr. M. D. McCutcheon was summoned and shortly after him Dr. Albert Michaels arrived. Stomach pumps were used in an effort to remove the poison, but without result. Mr. Frost died within a few minutes after the arrival of the physicians.

On the dresser in Mr. Frost's room was an ounce bottle, labeled "Chloroform," with its contents about half gone. The belief is expressed that the victim of the tragedy took the poison before he retired. Physicians say that the chloroform taken from the bottle was not sufficent to have caused death, but that the poison effected his weakened heart.

Two notes was found in the bed chamber. One was addressed to his wife and the other to his son, Dr.

Dry Chief Turns "Thumbs Down" on Invading Raiders

CINCINNATI, Jan. 17—Following a conference between state prohibition commissioner B. F. McDonald of Columbus and police chief William Copelan of this city it was announced late Friday that Cincinnati police, instead of deputies from village liquor courts, will make 'dry' arrests in Hamilton county'. The state will receive half of the fines imposed by the local municipal court. This is the plan that is being tried out in other Ohio counties.

HOOSIER WHO MADE MILLIONS AT 37 VICTIM OF PNEUMONIA

ONCE RAILROADER

NEW YORK, Jan. 17. — Daniel G. Reid, the 'tin plate king", died today of pneumonia. He was 66 years old.

Reid had been virtually an invalid for the past four years. He became ill, and Monday his ailment was diagnosed as pneumonia.

At midnight he began sinking rapidly.

Reid's career was one of the most remarkable in the realm of finance. At 25, he was a division superintendent on the Pennsylvania railorad. At 37 he had acquired a fortune of $30,000,000.

Worked for Pennsylvania.

Reid was born in Mur[illegible], Ind., in 1858. When, as a young man he was working for the Pennsylvania, he was an enthusiastic student of economics and business.

When the McKinley tariff became a law, the young "railroader" saw a splendid opportunity to make money. With William B. Leeds and William H. and James H. Moore, he organized the American Tin Plate company.

This stroke of business genius brought him the $30,000,000 at the time he was 37.

Interest in Tobacco Products

After Reid acquired his immense fortune in the tin-plate business, the United States Steel Corporation took it over. The organizers, with John W. Gates, who was also interested, received $120,000,000 in stock in the steel corporation.

Other big business in the organizing of which Reid had a prominent part, were the American Can Company and Tobacco Products company.

He created a sensation in the financial world by getting control of the Rock Island Railroad at the time Gates got hold of the Louisville and Nashville.

ROME QUIET AS MUSSOLINI WINS

ROME, Jan. 17.—Despite the expected vote of confidence, 303 to 33, accorded to Premier Mussolini last night when the opposition presented its resolution attacking his election program, the attacks on former Premiers Giolitti and Orlando, opposing leaders, had had the effect today of solidifying the elements lined up against the fascist premier.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Public order has not been disturbed in Rome during the movement against Premier Mussolin and the "situation is perfectly quiet," Henry P. Fletcher, American ambassador to Italy informed the state department today.

NEITHER SINKS

Destroyers Stand by as Ships Try to Reach Port.

BOSTON, Jan. 17—The Munson collier Munalbro and the Norton-Lilly steamship Robin Adair crashed in a head-on collision below Cape Cod early today. Both vessels were badly damaged.

A 40-foot hole was torn in the Robin Adair's No. 2 hold forward. After temporary repairs and precautions she was attempting to reach Vineyard Haven under her own power.

The Munalbro was bound to Portland, Maine, from Cape Henry, Va., with a cargo of coal. The collision occurred five miles southwest of the Handkerchief Shoals light ship.

The Robin Adair was in ballast from Boston for Baltimore.

Slippery Walks

Every twig on the Elm tree
Is ridged deep with ice.
The condition of the sidewalk
Is anything but nice.

You hasten for your trolley,
Your heels fly up so quick,
You come down hard and sudden,
Where the ice is smooth and thick.

The streets are all a glitter,
And a little wet on top,
You wouldn't mind the trouble,
If it wasn't for the slop.

The hill is long and slippery,
It never seems to thaw,
Next time you get a dishpan
and slide down to that car!

AMATEUR GANG CHISELS DOOR OF ENTERPRISE COAL CO. SAFE

Walnut Street Office is Looted Early Today.

FIND NO MONEY

Rifle Near Strongbox is Taken by Robbers.

Amateur yeggs entered the office of the Enterprise Coal Company, Walnut street at an early hour this morning, battered open the safe, found it empty and made their escape with a 22-25 caliber rifle, which they found in the office.

The robbery was discovered by members of the firm, at 6 o'clock. Police were notifed and the robbery was investigated by Chief McDermott.

The safe looters, believed to be youths, forced their way into the office by jimmying a window, which faces the wagon scales on the north-side of the building. Fearing that the place might be robbed members of the firm have made it a practice not to lock the outer door of the safe, but turned the lock on the inside door.

Hoped to Find Payroll.

With a chisel or some sharp pointed instrument and a hammer, the yeggs forced open the lock on the inside door, but found the safe empty so far as cash was concerned. Valuable papers were not molested.

The rifle, which the thieves took with them, was kept in the office to be used in case of an attempted holdup.

Chief McDermott believes the gang responsible for the coal office robbery plundered the safe of the Enterprise Laundry, and the Metsch Refractories company, at Newell, a few weeks ago, as each job bears the same earmarks. It is though that the robbers had planned the job Friday night, believing the week's payroll to be made up and ready for distribution on Saturday.

39 Ceramists Make Inspection Trip to District Plants

Thirty-nine members of the Pittsburgh division of the American Ceramic society journeyed to East Liverpool, Friday, where they inspected the No. 6 plant of the Homer Laughlin China company, at Newell, the No. 1 plant of the Hall China company, and the Lisbon plant of the R. Thomas & Sons.

The visitors, headed by J. W. Cruikshank, president of the Pittsburgh branch, arrived here on the 9:37 a. m. train and immediately were taken to Newell for a tour through the new Laughlin pottery. Much time was devoted to a study of the tunnel kilns being operated there. Returning to East Liverpool at noon, they were entertained at luncheon at the Elks' club. Prof. C. B. Harrop, Columbus, designer of the famous Harrop tunnel kiln, made a short address following the luncheon.

The party was divided for their afternoon trip, some of them going to Lisbon for an inspection of the R. Thomas & Sons' electric porcelain plant, the others to the Hall China company's plant here. The contingent, who went on the Lisbon excursion, returned to Pittsburgh last night via Salem, while the others left East Liverpool on the 4:54 train.

[EDITORIAL]

FATAL STUPIDITY

Tragedy today marked the inter-city prohibition enforcement officers' war.

The magistrate who issued the warrant authorizing the search of the private home where there was not an iota of suspicion relative to any infraction of the law, and the police, who made the visit, are responsible for the death of a highly respected citizen.

And other contributing factors are the so-called private detectives whose incentive is a percentage of fines assessed, and the snooping, gossiping individual who essays the role, directly or indirectly, of a "stool pigeon."

Worry over what he considered a reflection upon his stainless reputation so affected the mind of the innocent victim of the raiders' war that he was driven to the impulse of taking his own life. But his fellow citizens, who knew his actions were always above reproach, branded his arrest as another striking illustration of the extremes to which narrow-gauge minds will go.

It is a gruesome climax to a week of nonsensical conduct on the part of those responsible for the East Liverpool-Wellsville situation—a situation that has accomplished nothing toward the enforcement of the prohibition law, for few known bootleggers have been caught in the dragnets of the raiders.

The tragedy should drive home to the mayors, justices of peace and other court officials of East Liverpool, Wellsville and other communities their responsibilities in issuing search warrants. The law demands that a magistrate know whereof he acts in authorizing invasion of a man's castle. And unless he is convinced by investigation that the suspect is a law violator there is absolutely no excuse for empowering patrolmen or private detectives to search a residence. The court official who issued the search warrant in the East Liverpool raid stands convicted of stupidity.

But the real root of the evil in the inter-city outrage is the enactment by municipalities of legislation to pay private detectives a percentage of fines assessed in police court cases. It should be unnecessary to employ private detectives, who are working merely for the 10 per cent of fines assessed, to assist regular patrolmen in the enforcement of the anti-liquor law. There is too much encouragement for a mercenary to sign an affidavit for a search warrant.

The inter-city raiders' hostilities have been condemned by friends as well as foes of prohibition, for reports indicate that most of the victims were citizens who made wine or so-called home brew for their own use, not for sale.

The prohibition law is a measure that works a wonderful good, but it is a law that is much abused in its enforcement. The Review-Tribune believes in law enforcement, but the authors of the prohibition law never intended that the rights of the home should be trampled into the ground.

Is it not time to cease official stupidity, ban the practice of permitting outsiders to receive a part of liquor fines and let home officials rigidly enforce the law?

REV. B. R. JOHNSON SCORES IMPORTATION OF DETECTIVES FOR LIQUOR RAIDS HERE

Church of Christ Pastor Pays Tribute to Late Percy Frost and Explains Stand of Good Citizens.

Condemnation of the importation of private detectives as well as the invasion of private homes in the prohibition enforcement officers' war swept East Liverpool and Wellsville today, following the death of Percy Frost.

"Dismiss all imported help" was the demand voiced as news of the tragedy reached the far corners of the district. On all sides, tribute was paid the high standing of Mr. Frost in the community, while messages of sympathy poured into the late home.

Rev. B. R. Johnson, pastor of the First Church of Christ, who was at Mr. Frost's bedside when death came, issued a signed statement in which he insists that "law must function through the established and constituted forces," and urges that "we look after our own affairs and as citizens unite to make a decent community and to create a higher respect for the law."

Mr. Frost a Good Man.

Rev. Mr. Johnson said:

"The tragic and untimely death of my friend and neighbor, Mr. Percy Frost, calls for some word of sympathy to the family and a word of explanation to the public. To say that the good citizens of our city feel keenly about the death of this good man is only half right. We feel that a wrong has been committed against a home, against a life, and against the spirit of prohibition.

"Every one in this and neighboring communities knows full well that the writer has never been and is not now in sympathy with the traffic in liquor. We all know that our laws are being violated. We have thugs, bootleggers and criminals. But Percy Frost was not in this class.

Urges Sober Thinking

He was human and as such bore the weaknesses of the race. Mr. Frost was a good man and never did he violate the laws of his country or overstep the proprieties of decency and good citizenship. We cannot understand why a man's home has to be entered and a sick wife molested by a raiding party when violent crimes in high and low places go on undisturbed.

"Feeling is high today among our

Coolidge Plans Shake-up Because Of Haynes' Methods

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—A shakeup in the federal prohibition bureau with the present director, Roy A. Haynes, being succeeded by a more vigorous type of official, was forecast here today as a part of the general re-organization of administrative officers under President Coolidge.

Whether Haynes will actually be ousted or not remains to be seen, but it did become definitely known that President Coolidge is not satisfied with enforcement methods now prevailing.

The President's dissatisfaction is said to be due to the fact that too much attention is paid to small offenders against the dry laws, "Hip Toters" and casual revellers, and not enough to ferreting out the big rings and combinations that have reduced bootlegging to the basis of an organized industry.

CAWOOD BUYS PATTERSON CO. FOUNDRY HERE

New Owner Associated With Philanthropist for 25 Years.

Heirs to the estate of the late Monroe Patterson, manufacturer and philanthropist, who died November 22, have disposed of Mr. Patterson's holdings in The Patterson Foundry & Machine Co. to R. L. Cawood, president and general manager of the company, it was announced today.

Mr. Patterson, with his brother-in-law, Phil Morley, and Harry Dixon, established the foundry business in 1876. About six years later the latter two withdrew from the firm, which then assumed the name of The Patterson Foundry & Machine Co.

Mr. Cawood has been associated with Mr. Patterson in the management of the business for about 25 years. He has been general manager of the company for about 20 years and assumed the presidency upon the death of the late B. C. Simms, about two years ago.

"The executors of the estate of the late Monroe Patterson have disposed of his interests in the Patterson Foundry & Machin company to R. L. Cawood, president and general manager of the company, who will continue at the head of the company.

"Messrs Patterson and Cawood were associated together in this company for over 25 years. Mr. Cawood has been general manager of the company for the past 25 years and assumed the presidency upon the death of the late B. C. Simms, who was president of the company from the time it was organized until his death."

Percy Frost

Harry Frost, a member of the faculty of the University of Pittsburgh. While members of the family refused to discuss the contents of the two notes, one is said to have stated that he could not stand the humiliation over his arrest and the other gave instructions regarding insurance policies.

Widow is Ill.

Mr. Frost, members of his family declare, has been troubled with heart disease for several months. During the last few days he is said to have been in a verge of nervous collapse because of the raid upon his home. While his friends assured him that they believed him innocent of the charge, he is said to have imagined that the finger of scorn was being pointed at him.

Mrs. Frost today was under the care of a physician, being almost prostrated over her husband's death. In summoning the neighbors during the early morning hours, she suffered exposure which, it is feared, may result in pneumonia.

Mr. Frost was born at Longton, Stoke-on-Trent, England, November 5, 1860, being a son of Thomas and Elizabeth Frost. When a young man he took up the trade of decorating in English potteries, following the trade at plants in Torquay, Birmingham and Edinburgh. Afterwards he too kcharge of the R. H. Plant china took charge of the R. H. Plant china until 1880, when he came to the United States.

Expert Pottery Decorator.

Upon his arrival here Mr. Frost became associated with Swan and Whitehead, china decorators, of Trenton, N. J. Later he was identified with W. Charles Hendrickson, also of Trenton, and then accepted an offer made from the Mt. Washington Art Company, of New Bedford, Mass., manufacturers of glass ware. After a year with the Massachusetts concern, he returned to the employment of Mr. Hendrickson, but in 1886 came to East Liverpool where he accepted a position with the Homer Laughlin China company, which then operated a small plant in East End.

Mr. Frost was employed for nine years at the Laughlin pottery, where he was foreman of the decorating department. In 1895 he took charge of one of the potteries at Sebring where he remained for several years. Returning to East Liverpool in 1903, he became art director for the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles pottery, which place he held until about 14 years ago, when he was appointed local agent for the Hanovia Chemical company, of Newark, N. J.

Member of Episcopal Church.

The deceased was united in marriage to Miss Lillian May Mackintosh, of Pittsburgh, who survives him together with one son Harry, a graduate dentist.

Mr. Frost has been a member of St. Stephen's Episcopal church for many years and was a member of the choir. He was also a member of the East Liverpool Male Chorus.

Coroner Dr. J. M. VanFossan, East Palestine, has been notified of Mr. Frost's death and is expected to arrive here late this afternoon or tonight to conduct an inquest.

Soviet Permits Sale of Vodka.

Sunday Is "Friendship Day" In Church of Christ Revival

Efforts Will be Made to Have 1,000 Persons Hear Evangelist Lockhart Preach Sunday Morning.

"Friendship Day" will be observed Sunday in connection with the Lockhart-Harbinson revival campaign at the First Church of Christ. An effort is being made to have 1,000 persons attend the morning service.

Evangelist Lockhart will preach on the subject "Friendship". The afternoon meeting, at 3 o'clock, will be for women and girls only, at which he will discuss "Sweatheart, Wife and Mother." "Excuses" is the subject for his evening discourse. At the Saturday evening service, the pastor will use the topic "Pitching Toward Sodom"

A delegation of 100 church people from Wellsville attended last night's service in a body, coming here in special street cars. The Spring orchestra, which the Wellsville party brought with them, gave a 15-minute concert. A vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. J. P. Ebert.

The evangelist pleaded for church unity in his Friday evening discourse. He said:

"Whether the plea of the church of Christ is to be finally accepted as they hold forth a program for union upon which they believe the whole Christian world can unite, remains yet to be seen, but at least you are to be congratulated on consistently and continuously for a hundred years urging this program upon the divided protestant world.

"That you have the common name which will eventually prevail in the united church no one can doubt; that the great cardinal truth you demand of all who come into the church of Christ, 'that I believe with all my heart that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the Living God,' will eventually be the short and simplified creed of the whole church is just as evident; that the baptism you practice and urge as the new testiment baptism is likewise a baptism that all protestant people accept without question is also simply stating a well recognized truth; that your earnest insistence that all who come into the church of Christ shall come penitently and with a real spiritual regeneration in the new birth also makes your presentation of the gospel in accord with the best thought and highest purpose of the greatest leaders in the protestant bodies of America.

"You have urged that in the program for union that union can only come by all Christian people uniting on great cardinal principles that all readily accept and that human opinions and mere methods of organization and work be not made the test of fellowship seems to appeal to the common senses of those leaders who are studying seriously this program of ultimate union."

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Stock prices continued today the rally which was impending at the close of Friday's session. The early trading was in comparatively small volume, with interest centered chiefly in the oils, motors and specialty stocks. Sales were mostly in 100 share lots with few large blocks of stocks coming out.

Three days of reactionary movements had apparently strengthened the position of the market and there was no pressure either of liquidation or shortselling. The usual bullish weekend business statements were issued by the mercantile agencies representing an increasing volume of business being handled in all lines, with a gradual decline of stocks of goods on dealers's shelves. Another strong opening featured the grain markets while cotton was steady and foreign exchange irregular.

Nash Motors spectacular rise to 285, a new gain of 19 points for the day and a rise of 75 points from last Saturday's close was the feature of the early trading. Allis Chalmers rose 2 points and General Electric and other of the active industrials sold from 1 to 3 points above Friday's close. Considerable interest was displayed in the shipping stocks, which appeared to have started another rally under the lead of American International and Atlantic Gulf. General Motors, Mack trucks and other of the motor and accessory stocks were active at slightly higher prices. Equipment stocks were also in good demand.

The oil stocks retained the prominent position into which they moved after the turn of the year. Reports from the various producing fields were favorably. There are reports that Wortham, thought at first to be a menace to the stabilizing of the oil market, woul dsoon reach its peak, afto rwhich production would be much smaller than at present.

Good buying returned to Shell Union, Simms, Cosden, Marland Independent Oil, Texas company and the Pan-Americans. Houston gained five points on reports that back dividends would be paid on February 1.

Standard dividend rails and industrials reflected the heavy demand for stocks of this class from investors. It was estimated in authoritative sources this week that from 100,000 to 150,000 shares of stocks were being withdrawn from the market daily for the account of permanent investors which reduced the floating supply by that amount. [illegible] to 124½ and New York Central, a prominent investment railroad stock, sold fractionally higher.

LAWYER FIGHTS FOR MATRICIDE

Public Defender Aids Self-styled "Jazz Baby."

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—The battle to save Dorothy Ellingson, self-styled "Jazz Baby" and only 16-year-old matricide of record, was on today.

Public Defender Frank Egan made his first appearance in her behalf at the coroner's inquest into the death of Mrs. Annie Ellingson, the slain mother, which was scheduled to get under way today.

Simultaneously he announced that he would demand when the girl's case comes up in women's court next Thursday that it be transferred to juvenile court.

It was revealed today that Egan had already clashed with the authorities over the case. He claimed that he had been denied permission to see the girl "while the police cinched their case," despite the fact that she had no counsel or funds and had expressed a preference for his conducting her defense.

A flood of requests from psychologists and alienists all over the state to be permitted to see and study the girl were denied.

It was possible that an agreement would be reached to permit the state and defense to appoint two each to see the girl in company with the city physician.

Prepares to Face Father.

Dorothy, refreshed by her second night of good sleep in jail—now keeping regular hours and staying in at night at the restraint of the law—prepared today for the ordeal of facing her accusing father and brother for a second time.

They were expected to be present at the coroner's inquest, Earl Ellingson, son of the slain woman, and brother of Dorothy, who has expressed the bitter wish that she could hang, was to appear as a witness in the first proceedings against her. He was to tell the story of finding the mother cold in death in their little cottage home. It was possible that the father would be called to establish facts concerning the identity of the slain woman.

Although she was to be present as a constitutional right, Dorothy was not to be asked to testify.

Egan said he would not permit her to do so even had authorities planned to seek her story at this first probe into her mother's death.

Asks Juvenile Court Trial.

"Miss Ellingson's case properly belongs to juvenile court," he said today. "It is her legal right and we will demand it."

He admitted that it would be possible for the juvenile court presiding judge to remand the case to superior court for trial on a capital charge. The most severe sentence that could be meted out in juvenile court would be seven years in a correctional institution, or until she is 23. The extreme penalty in superior court would be life imprisonment.

Mrs. Theresa Meikle, woman prosecutor, who has been assigned to the case by District Attorney Brady, was to make her first appearance in the case today.

Inquire Into "Jazzland" Parties.

Meanwhile police continued their inquiry into the "Jazzland" parties to which the girl attributed her downfall. More arrests of "sheiks" were expected today. Police obtained considerable information from May Fitzgerald, Dorothy's companion on many "parties."

She told of gay carousals at the beach and other places. She declared that Dorothy had tried the effects of [illegible] for a thrill.

"Dorothy would do anything to get a thrill or attract men," she said.

The fact that her mother was buried late yesterday seemed to have no effect on Dorothy.

"I'm glad they didn't let me go to the funeral," she said. "I prefer to remember mother as she was and then father and brother probably would have made a scene if I had gone."

1,000 Auto Owners Get 1925 Licenses; 4,000 Must Act

Approximately 1,000 of the 5,000 automobile owners in East Liverpool have taken out their 1925 automobile license tags, it was stated today.

The time limit for the 1924 license plates expires at midnight next Tuesday and positively no further time extensions will be authorized, Secretary of State Thad Brown has advised deputy registrars. Enforcement officers have been asked to arrest motorists who fail to display the new series plates after Tuesday.

About 800 of the 1,000 tags issued here this far are for pleasure cars, the other 200 being truck licenses.

An especially prepared license tag is available for motor vehicles with interchangeable bodies used for commercial and pleasure purposes. The plate carries the letters, "P. C." and is issued only by the secretary of state. Application for the special license, however, may be made through the local deputy registrar.

BOYS FACE AUTO THEFT CHARGES

Ralph Wooley, 17, and Howard Johnson, 16, West End youths, are at liberty on their own recognizance, while police are searching for three other youths, who are believed responsible for the theft of several automobiles which have been reported during the last few weeks.

Wooley and Johnson according to Chief of Police McDermott, have admitted complicity in the theft of three cars and at the same time have implicated three companions.

Since the first of the year, nine automobiles have been reported stolen here. Most of thees have been recovered. The latest theft to be reported to the police is that of an automobile belonging to Claude Nease, which was taken while parked in front of the Ceramic theatre, Thursday night. The machine had not been located up to an early hour this afternoon.

Soviet Trade Envoy Predicts U. S. Will Recognize Russia

MOSCOW, Jan. 17—Recognition of Russia by the United States government this year was predicted today by Christian Ravovsky, Soviet trade envoy, speaking before the Teachers' Congress.

Some such recognition would be of "great importance to Russia," Ravovsky said, "it would be negligible if conditioned upon a Dawes plan for Russia."

"Experience shows," he continued, "that the capitalists want to wrest from us concessions which would enslave the country and convert Russia into a Moroco."

He asserted that the Soviets were determined to preserve the elementals of socialism, but that foreign investments should be protected.

citizens. We need sober thinking and we must follow our intelligences rather than our impulses. To say that the enforcement of law in this and nearby communities has been puerile and jumbled, is saying the truth. Law must function through the established and constituted forces. Our own local people should be committed to the task and if they are inadequate for the task because of lack of numbers, let us see that we have an adequate force to man the situation. Let us dismiss all imported help. Let us look after our own affairs and as citizens unite as one man to make a decent community and to create a higher respect for the law.

"Our deepest sympathy goes out to the dead man. He was a good man. He had a pure heart. He was loved by all. His wife is a fine, noble and cultured woman. She must be honored and comforted in her sorrow. Human life and human well being is the chief end of government. We cannot remain silent when these things are molested or disturbed. That we must right our ways as a city and commend ourselves to the right thinking world by a more orderly conduct of our affairs is now apparent."

The boys confessed the murder of H. W. Underwood, a traveling salesman, whom they also robbed after he had given them a lift in his automobile.

HIGHS DIVIDE WITH FREEDOM

Local Girls' Team Wins, While Boys' Five is Defeated.

Wellsville high school basketball squads broke even with Freedom scholastic passers in contests last night on the home floor. A large crowd saw the inaugural contests of the home season.

The Wellsville girls' team defeated the visiting girls, 29 to 25, and the Orange and Black quintet lost out to the Pennsylvanians, 27 to 25.

The principal clash of the twin-bill proved a fitting contest for the opener. There was plenty of action and thrills were not lacking.

Zimmerman's five jumped into the lead at the outset, penetrating the Freedom defenses for frequent scores. At the end of the half the locals were leading by the count of 18 to 9.

The visitors came back with a rush in the second period and a desperate assault on the Wellsville baskets materially reduced the Orange and Black lead. Continuing their attack into the final quarter the Freedom five crept steadily upon the locals until, just a few seconds before the whistle blew, they tied the score at 25-25. One final toss by Forward Christian just as the whistle was sounding shot through the hoop and brought down with it the two points that gave Freedom the game.

The unerring eye of Miss Georgia Weekly was the big thing in the Wellsville girls' victory. Miss Weekly scored 12 field goals and three fouls, or all but two points of her team's 29.

"MEET THE WIFE," NEW YORK COMEDY SUCCESS, AT CERAMIC ON THURSDAY

Augusta Baylston.

Lynn Startling's delightfully witty comedy, "Meet the Wife," with Augusta Boylston as the heroine will be presented at the Ceramic Theatre, Thursday, January 22.

The gallery of character sketches presented in "Meet the Wife" are all of American types met in every day life. The dialogue is good, crisp, characteristic conversion that reveals exactly what the people of the stage think of each other and of life in general. This play captured New York audiences for one year and delighted Chicago for two months.

Augusta Bolystion's acting of Mrs. Gertrude Lennox, an up to date who takes a second husband too hastily, with her shallowness and gush absurd philosophies and stifled fears, her vivacity and her shrewd flashes of common sense is a characterization which brings many a smile and laugh long after one has left the theatre. There is tolerance for the young couple who are at that stage of their courtship when public opinion give license for their being perfectly idotic. There is merriment in the complications arising from the return of Gertrude's husband and the snappy dialogue's husband pro tem and Messenger Bellis who had made his escape from martial toils in the confusion of the San Francisco earthquake and fire—and rejoices at his freedom.

AMERICAN THEATRE

Three Days Starting Monday

"THE DARLING OF NEW YORK"
With Baby Peggy.

The baby film star enacts the role of a waif who became stranded with a bunch of crooks in the New York Ghetto through the carelessness of a nurse maid. Throughout the play the child carries with her an old rag doll. The audience is let in on the secret of the doll's importance in the play when the gem smuggler who abducts the child places a fortune in smuggled diamonds in the stuffing of the doll.

Another Event.

Peggy was assigned by an unkind foster-parent to the duty of scrubbing the kitchen floor. That in itself is quite a task for such a tiny youngster. But her method of meeting the situation should make kitchen history.

She tied a mop cloth to the tail of the dog. Then she appropriated a dried herring from an ice-box, which she tied on a string to a broom handle. Climing into a chair she began fishing—for the pup.

With the fragrance of the herring assailing its nostrils, the dog immediately forgot the mop trailing behind him. Peggy turned 'round and 'round in the chair, coaxing the dog around the chair. By maneuvring the chair around the kitchen and pouring frequent applications of suds on the floor the kitchen soon was well scrubbed.

Panama Overlooked Ending World War; Treaty Now Signed

PANAMA, Jan.—Panama has just ended her participation in the World War by the ratification of the treaty of St. Germain, establishing peace with Austria.

As a signatory to the treaty, the Government of Panama received in due course a bulky shipment of volumes, which having a dry and legal appearance, were shoved to one side in the foreign office and forgotten. On a recent change of ministers, a house cleaning disclosed the presence of the treaty, and it was forthwith handed over to the national assembly for ratification. This accomplished, the war was over.

EAST LIVERPOOL—AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

Slippery Sidewalks

"East Liverpool has more icy sidewalks than any city I have visited this winter."

This significant remark, made yesterday by a salesman for a jobbing house, whose territory includes Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, was an echo of the comment of hundreds of people who have risked fractured limbs by traversing not only sidewalks but sections of highways usually reserved for vehicular traffic during the last few days.

And the situation is attributable to the fact that residents, seemingly unmindful of their own safety as well as safeguards for their neighbors, neglected to remove accumulated snow. Rain, followed by freezing temperature, added the touch which made walking perilous.

In most cities, ordinances are on the statute books, providing penalties for failure to clean sidewalks within 24 or 48 hours after a snowfall. East Liverpool, it is said, has similar legislation, but it is dust-covered because of the many years it has been held in the municipal archives.

The Golden Rule should be adopted here relative to the icy sidewalks. If there were more consideration of the welfare of our neighbors, East Liverpool should have less difficulty climbing and descending its many hilly thoroughfares. Let's remember this when the next sleet storm converts the sidewalks into skating places.

Easy On Germany

The United States has evidently compromised in its claims on Germany. The amount agreed upon for the payment of war damage claims and the American army of occupation totals $600,000,000, with an allowance of $350,000,000 for the former and $250,000,000 for the latter. These in themselves are moderate charges, considerably less than might have been expected. But it is pointed out that even so, they are smaller than they appear.

Not to mention interest to date, they represent not a present principal but aggregate payments over a period of 25 years. Discounted at current rates, it is estimated that the combined damage and army maintenance payments, even if every dollar is paid according to program, have a present value of only a little over $300,000,000.

This is not said in criticism, but in illustration of the fact that Uncle Sam has been obliged to cut down his claims against Germany very much as the allies have, in order to get anything at all. We shall be lucky indeed if we are able to avoid a similar trimming of the allied debts still unfunded.

Pearls

Are pearls jewels? Most persons will say yes without a moment's hesitation. The government is not so sure. So there has arisen a controversy over the importation of a certain famous string of pearls.

It is a necklace of 43 perfect pearls of large and finely graded size, which belonged to the former Princess Anastasia of Greece, previously Mrs. Leeds, wife of the American "Tin Plate King." Naturally, a combination of pearls and royalty is hard to beat, in its appeal to a plain and democratic people.

If pearls are merely pearls, they are admissible on payment of a 20 per cent duty. If they are classified as "jewels," the duty rises to 80 per cent, which would mean several hundred thousand dollars. And rather than give all that money to the country where it was made, the family would take the pearls and sell them abroad.

Which might be just as well. Big, perfect pearls, diamonds and other gew-gaws are lovely things; but the lovelier they are, the less often they are worn and the fewer people are able to enjoy them. Also, the "overhead" on them is enormous. There are outfits of jewelry in this country which, considering interest on the investment and expense of safe-keeping, cost the owners many thousand dollars for every time they wear them.

The finest jewels, like the finest paintings and sculptures, are only worth their market value when they are open to the view of all, as such things are in museums.

MANY PEOPLE BUY STOCKS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Since the election the New York stock exchange has been the scene of what has appeared from the outside to be wild speculation. On many days more than a million shares of stock have changed hands, involving vast sums of money. There has been a real stock market boom of proportions not experienced for some years.

A study of this activity has revealed that this boom is substantially different from the usual type. Stock market booms ordinarily reflect trading among professional dealers and speculators, those who think they see opportunities either to buy low and in a few days sell at a higher figure, or to sell at a good price and buy at a lower figure before making delivery, which is known as selling short. All such trading is done on margin, which means that the purchaser does not put up the full purchase price, but only about 10 points. He really takes a sort of option on a stock, selling it again before he ever really possesses the shares.

The difference in the present boom, as revealed by a study of the trading, is that a much larger percentage of stocks has been purchased outright by investors. Orders have been placed for stock and paid for in full, the certificates being delivered to the buyer who intends to hold them indefinitely.

The federal reserve board probably was the first agency to discover this. When speculators are trading actively, they deal with borrowed money. When the stock market boom began to develop the board expected that a strong demand for credit would develop as usual and its failure to appear resulted in an analysis of the situation. The investigation showed that there was no greatly increased demand for bank credit because persons from all over the country were causing the boom by buying stocks outright for investment. This steady buying was largely responsible for putting the price of stocks higher and higher.

There was some bank borrowing, but member banks in New York had no occasion to red'scount with the federal reserve bank to obtain funds because the investors from all over the country were sending money to New York to pay for their purchases. This put so much ready money in New York banks that it was unnecessary to have recourse to the federal reserve bank.

A SIGN OF PROSPERITY

This unusual type of stock market boom is causing much comment among economists and students of American financial affairs. It is regarded as an excellent sign, revealing a healthy and prosperous condition. Examination of the records shows that there has been a tremendous increase in ownership of big enterprises by the people generally. Not so long ago a stockholder in a corporation was regarded as rather a rare being. The popular conception was that the man who owned shares and received a portion of his income from dividends belonged to the Wall Street class of rich men. Nowadays a stockholder is a familiar figure. Every street car load of passengers contains perhaps a dozen stockholders in industrial enterprises.

The fresh buying movement reflected in this winter's stock market boom indicates that when the statistics are compiled it will be seen that thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands, have been added to the numbers of those who own stocks in industrial corporations.

In 1900 there were only 4,400,000 stockholders in all companies in the United States. Each stockholder held on an average of 140 shares. By 1917 the number had doubled, being then 8,600,000 with an average of 77 shares each. The latest figures available are for 1923, when there were 14,400,000 stockholders, each holding an average of 49 shares.

This shows that the numbers of rich men holding large interests have been heavily cut down. The average holding by the individual stockholders has been cut in three, or nearly so. By the time statistics of this winter's avalanche of popular purchasing are available it doubtless will be shown that there has been a still wider distributon.

Great corporations have encouraged the purchase of stocks by their employes and by the public generally. The American Telephone and Telegraph company is reputed to have the largest number of stockholders of any company in the country. In 1900 this company had only 7,535 stockholders, but in 1923 it had 281,149.

MANY HOLD STEEL SHARES

The United States Steel corporation in 1900 had 54,018 stockholders, while in 1923 it had 179,090. It is natural for the American mind to think of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey as a closely held corporatino, the property of the Rockefeller family. That this is far from the truth is shown by the fact that stockholders increased from 3,832 in 1900 to 81,070 in 1923.

The Pennsylvania railroad in 1900 had an unusually large number of stockholders for that period—51,543. But in the intervening period it has trebled this number and now reports 155,228.

Perhaps a more striking increase is shown by the United States Rubber company. From only 3,000 stockholders in 1900 this company has increased to 34,024 in 1923—more than tenfold.

This movement has been going on for 20 years, resulting in what is called an industrial revolution. Instead of employing the Russian system of going out and taking over property by force or by "direct action" as the Bolsheviks call it, the American people are bringing about a similar result through the peaceable and legal way of purchase. An indication of how corporate income is spreading down through the masses of the people is revealed by statistics of income prepared by the internal revenue bureau. As late as 1916 the income group having income of $20,000 a year and more received 79 per cent of all the dividends paid by American corporations. Five years later this group was receiving only 46.8 per cent or less than half of the dividends paid, persons of the lower income groups receiving the remainder.

In 1922 the income group from $1,000 to $5,000 a year received 18.4 per cent of all the dividends paid, more than one-sixth of the total corporate net income of the country. The class from $5,000 to $10,000 received 13.4 per cent of all the dividends. Thus persons receiving incomes of $10,000 a year and less received a third of all the dividend income paid by American business activity.

These dividends, of course, are in addition to the wages and salaries paid these persons. By adding together dividends and wages paid it would seem that a very large proportion of the gross income of American industry is returned to the pockets of persons of moderate means, a situation unheard of in any other country save the United States.

The statistics show that the American people as a whole, and not small groups of them, actually own American business, and this winter's active buying of stocks shows that the tendency is being carried on with acceleration.

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 17.—Possibility that the thirteenth annual international sweepstakes race will not take place on the local motor speedway on Memorial Day was emphasized in a statement by members of the Indiana legislature who are sponsoring a "blue law" program.

The legislators said they were reasonably certain that Governor Edward Jackson would not veto a measure prohibiting the holding of the speedway classic on Memorial Day, if the bill is passed by the general assembly now in session. Former Governor Warren T. McCray exercised the veto power when a similar bill came up for his approval two years ago.

It is the contention of the bill's advocates that a motor speedway race is not in keeping with the spirit of Memorial Day. Their objection is one of principle, and no opposition is voiced to holding the race at a different time.

In the event that the speedway bill becomes a law, it is understood the 500-mile event, premier of all speedway races and always participated in by the world's best drivers, will be held on some proximate date.

Entry blanks for the $50,000 prize race are in the mails, and several noted pilots already have announced they will compete again this season. T. E. Myers, secretary-treasurer of the speedway association, is in Europe attempting to interest factories on the continent in entering racing teams, as is the practice among American manufacturers.

Belgium, France and Italy will be visited by Myers before he goes to England to obtain an audience with English automobile magnates, it was said. He is to return to Indianapolis early in February. No foreign car has won a race here since the late Howard Wilcox, driving a French Peugeot, emerged the victor in 1919.

The race this year will mark the first appearance of the 122 cubic inches displacement cars on the local speedway, according to a ruling of the American Automobile association. Hhereafter racing engines will be limited to 91½ cubic inches. Conditions for the coming race are almost identical with those of the 1924 event.

The awards amount to $50,000 in cash, with the winner receiving $10,000 and the remainder graduating among the other drivers down to the tenth pilot to finish. He is given $1,400. The late Joe Boyer, in a Duesenberg, won the 1924 race, averaging 98.23 miles an hour.

Seventy-two murders, a new record, were committed in Indianapolis in 1924, according to Chief of Police H. F. Rikhoff. This was twice the number of homicides called to the attention of police in 1923.

Traffic law violators also set up a new record during the past year. Police records show 15,157 offenders were arrested, 3,187 of whom were charged with speeding.

Mrs. Martha Hodson, who is 93 years old and who isn't shy "like other girls" about admitting her age, has a new secret for feeling young after 40. She expressed it in the words—"keep busy."

"I've been so busy all my life I haven't realized how old I was getting to be," Mrs. Hodson confided.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 17.—A visit to New Orleans is not complete without a stop at the Old Absinthe House on Bourbon and Bienville streets. This was once the headquarters of the celebrated pirate Lafitte. The floor is coated with sawdust and there is the musty air of antiquity.

The ancient bar remains even to the marble slab that has been worn into grooves by the many glasses under the absinthe dripper. The ancient circular stairway, patched and shaky, is 175 years old. There are many private rooms where high carnival privacy has given way to the sipping of soft drinks.

A bartender of the pre-Volstead days—hair roached back and fierce mustachios—tells you of the departed glories. He tells of the hard-drinking days when night before roysterers came to the absinthe house with dawn and quaffed three or four absinthes for pickups.

No old haunt I have ever visited retains so much of the past. You somehow expect to hear the rattle of the saber or to see a swash-buckler in cape and high top boots pop out from one of the myriad turnings with a knife in his teeth.

Many duel challenges were made in the Old Absinthe House and were fought at sun up on the dueling grounds which has become a beautiful city owned park.

A sort distance from the Old Absinthe House is the old slave mart. The slave block is in the center of a Creole balconied court. Here men and women were sold "up the river" to the highest bidder.

New Orleans awakens much in the same fashion as Paris. The people greet dawn with a song. Dardies whistle along the street. There is a zip to pedestrians. You get the idea here are a happy people looking forward joyously to another day.

This afternoon we decided to let Bassett Blakely act as guide. He led us to an oyster bar and permitted us to watch him devour 16 oysters. His dismissal as guide immediately followed.

It interested me to know what effect prohibition has had on New Orleans. It has always been said that the law would strike the hardest blow at New Orleans and New York gaiety. I saw no evidence of it. The cafes are flourishing and there is a light heartedness about the city that one expects to find.

It seems to me I saw the perfect type of my visualization of an old southern gentleman today. It was in the French quarter. He was tall and as straight as an arrow. A homespun cape was close around his shoulders. In his right hand he carried a gold-knobbed stick. He wore a wide brimmed hat at a jaunty angle and a huge cameo pin decorated the front of his starched white shirt. His silver hair and goatee gave him an unusual dignity. You felt instinctively that here was a man who was a capable judge of horseflesh and whisky.

And I especially like the way the men greet the ladies with a wide sweeping flourish of the hat and a deep bow. New Orleans sets her ladies on a high pinnacle. And deservedly so, for they are strikingly beautiful to behold.

COMMAND, OR KEEP QUIET

One of Napoleon's sayings, most characteristic of him, was "J'ordonne, ou je me tais." That means, "I give orders, or I say nothing." That describes Calvin Coolidge. He proved, as vice president, and during the campaign, that he knew how to say nothing, when not talking seemed wise.

Now, politicians discover that he also knows how to give orders. And, it doesn't please all of them.

BROADCASTING RELIGION

The Paulist fathers of New York will install a powerful radio station, to cost $40,000, to be used "to teach the truth about the Catholic church to the people of the United States."

That means obeying, on a gigantic scale, the command to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Paulist fathers undoubtedly will have competition, for the air is high and wide, and the ether through which the radio message travels reaches to the farthest fixed star. Each individual can "tune in" to get the message that he wants.

Unfortunately, there will probably be more tuning in for jazz music than for religious exhortation.

AN ECLIPSE COMING

Foreign scientists are coming in rapidly from all directions to study the sun's eclipse. They will use it to help verify or disprove part of the Einstein theory.

And not one of them will be frightened. Nobody except few savages here and there will believe, as everybody once believed, that an evil spirit is trying to eat up the sun. Nobody will kneel down and pray that the sun may come back to save the world from total darkness and that the devouring demon be compelled to drop it.

Superstition was not confined to the "lower classes" in the good old days, and it is not confined to them now.

That good, learned man, a true American patriot of the seventeenth century, Increase Mather, who wrote the "Essay on Remarkable Providences," observed an eclipse of the sun, and believed it was intended to express the grief of nature at the death of President Chauncey, of Harvard college. He was mistaken. The sun and nature didn't even know that Chauncey was dead.

HOW RICH IS AMERICA?

How much do you think the United States is worth, all together, in thousands of millions of dollars?

According to the census bureau, all the property in the United States three years ago amounted to about $320,803,862,000. That means 320 times one thousand million dollars, with 803 millions to spare.

It's a great deal of money, but you may be sure that its much less than the United States is worth. Properly developed the state of Texas will be worth more than the total "wealth of the United States" as now estimated.

Nobody has the faintest idea what the real wealth of this country amounts to. In 10 years the total wealth, according to the figures above, has increased more than 72 per cent. Give this nation fifty million more inhabitants, intelligent, willing to work, and they would raise the value of the nation's property 500 per cent in half a generation.

The value of the nitrogen in the air, which men will eventually extract cheaply, could buy a dozen Rockefellers, if you could only get the wealth floating around in the air above some small state. We're very rich. Unfortunately we are not safe from attack.

President Coolidge, it is said, indorses a bill that would spend one hundred and fifty million dollars in six years, $25,000,000 a year for new federal buildings. The president's indorsement is wise. During the war there was no building, and building needs should be improved.

But this thought is recommended to the president and to his advisers. Don't overlook the fact that $200,000 worth of flying machines from a foreign country could destroy every one of the $150,000,000 worth of buildings in short order.

It would be worth while to spend a few million dollars to get the needed fighting airplanes and swift pursuit planes, if only as insurance for the billions of dollars' worth of property, open to attack in this city.

Germany and France already have their tariff troubles. Under the Dawes arrangement, Germany may now set up tariff walls against France, although she may not have an army or flying machines.

England is agitated, because the balance of trade is against her, and, as a nation not able to live on her own products, she must sell goods abroad or sink into poverty.

This country feels cheerful about business. Our trade balance for the past 12 months was more than nine hundred million dollars. The exact figures show that we sold to other nations more than we bought from them by a margin of $997,285,000. That may be good for us, although there are two views on that question. It is bad for Europe. She must get money from us to pay her debts to us. She can't manufacture the gold.

What will happen when, in the course of the Dawes plan, it becomes necessary for Germany to pay really big indemnities every year? This is an answer to that question, by one of the most important and able financiers in the country.

"Germany will say to France and England, when the indemnities become heavy, 'if you insist on payment, very well. I must cut prices to the bone and undersell you, as I CAN do in the principal markets of the world, thus throwing your workers out of employment, and your industries into disorder.'

"France, not much of an export nation, will tell Germany to pay in full, and do as she pleases in the world markets.

"England, on the contrary, bound to sell all over the world or starve, and with a threatening radical labor party to worry her, will demand that Germany compete on a reasonable basis, even though it might mean smaller reparations.

"Then, France and England, on opposite sides of the fence, will have to fight it out. Germany will say, truthfully, that she cannot get cash for unprecedentedly huge reparation payments, without taking world markets from other countries."

That is probably as good a description of what will happen as any. But nobody knows what the situation will really be, at any time. It is all tenporizing guessing.

Half Gallon Cans Passing.

The half gallon can as a staple size for commodities such as oils, greases, paints, varnish and industrial compounds will gradually disappear if the standardization experts of the government and large industries are successful in their undertakings to do away with so many sizes in their efforts to simplify industries. Some industries, doubting the wisdom of the move, are studying the "economic" values of these small sizes by offering them at the full gallon price instead of at a premium as has been the custom.

How to Solve Puzzle.

The best way to solve this cross-word puzzle is to run over the list of horizontal and vertical synonyms in search of evident or "easy" words. If horizontal, the word you are looking for must extend crosswise from the number to the first shaded stop on the right; if vertical, it must extend downward from the number to the first shaded stop below. When finished, the words should read equally well crosswise and downward.

APPENDICITIS FIEND IS ANGRY BECAUSE OPERATION WAS FAKE

SOFIA—Sofia has an appendicitis fiend, perhaps the first in history.

More than a year ago the wife of a prominent Sofia business man complained of pains in her right side and decided immediately that she was suffering from appendicitis.

Specialists in Sofia and Vienna who examined her declared she was in perfect physicial condition with not even the faintest suggestion of appendicitis.

But the pains, according to the woman, continued to bother her and she finally persuaded Dr. Paltcheff to operate. She left the hospital declaring herself to be in excellent health.

For a year eveerything went fine, but recently the woman met on the street the nurse who had attended her in the hospital.

The joke was too good to keep so the nurse informed her former patient that the operation was a fake and that the skin only had been cut.

Immediately the pains returned, according to the self-acclaimed victim and again she is besieging Dr. Paltcheff to remove her appendix.

The doctor in a quandry. If he doesn't remove the woman's appendix he is liable to prosecution for performing a bogus operation. But the woman is entirely well. He is considering the possibility of operating upon a real appendicitis patient at the same time and showing the would be chronic sufferer the other woman's appendix as her own.

HIGH DOWNED BY WELLSBURG

Locals Drop Hard Fought Floor Contest Here, Score 44-16.

Wellsburg High school floor passers making their first appearance on the Rock Springs floor in a number of years defeated Chester High last evening by a score of 44 to 16. Chester High second team won the preliminary contest from Newell, score 18 to 13.

Wellsburg started off with a rush at the opening whistle scoring a point on a free throw by Goodin. Matthews tossed another from the foul line for the visitors. Myers scored for Chester from the foul mark and then Wellsburg went far into the lead by making four field goals in rapid succession. Tuttle made a point for Chester and West added another for the visitors. Campbell shot Chester's first field goal and Myers promptly followed with another two pointer. Bane and West came through with field goals and the first quarter ended with Wellsburg leading, score 16 to 6.

Goodwin began the second quarter with a field goal. Campbell then shot two field goals for Chester and Myers added to the score by tossing a foul. Goodwin went on a shooting rampage and shot several markers from the foul line. Matthews then sent one through the net for a couple of points. The half ended with the Brooke county tossers in the lead, score 28 to 11.

The visitors continued their fast playing in the second half. Myers opened the period by counting from the foul line. Matthews scored two points on free throws. Goodwin and Matthews then scored from the field. Campbell made ap oint from the foul line and Bennett shot a field goal.

The third quarter found the visitors leading by a margin of 34 to 15. Wellsburg run up 10 more markers in the final session while the locals slightly increased their score.

Chester High second team were victors in a hard fought battle with Newell. Coach Kidder's squad were in the lead at the end of the first half, scores 9 to 5. The locals showed a reversal of form in the last half and soon took the lead which they held until the finish.

Goodin was the high point getter for Wellsburg while Crawford's floor work was spectacular. Senate Still Deadlocked.

West Virginia state senate is still unorganized as the result of the action of two insurgent senators who decline to attend the sessions. Several ballots were taken yesterday but no presiding officer was named.

The house which met and organized promptly, adjourned until Monday when it is expected the deadlock in the upper chamber will be broken.

Life Budgets Proposed.

Several colleges, looking to modern needs in the curriculum, have included in their new courses one for "life budgeting" which means not only training on how to budget and spend financial income, but also on budgeting time, including leisure, work, reading and other pursuits. This is felt necessary partly because organized labor is getting a gradual reduction in working hours, leaving more and more leisure, a great deal of which, it is said, is now wasted in a way that does as much physical harm as the surcease from too much work does good.

Watch Has Novel Prototypes.

Polite Parisian society used the watch in the sixteenth century when it became bad form for the guest or host to look at it to note the time. To avoid this embarrassment, a watchmaker originated a timepiece that had raised hands and time could be told by feeling it inside the pocket. Another ingenious device for telling time in the dark was a clock that had on its dial twelve small cups each filled with a different spice. The one seeking the time would feel around the dial to where the hands were and then taste the spice.

Spare the Choke Lessen the Carbon

The use of Freedom Oil may not eliminate entirely the formation of carbon. If you use your choke too much, you cause a mixture overly rich in gasoline to be drawn into your motor. The excessive amount of carbon in this mixture does not burn completely and carbon is deposited.

Use Freedom Gas and Oil—disengage your clutch before starting—your machine will turn over easier and start more quickly—and you will need use your choke only sparingly.

SUNDAY SCHOOL, CHURCH FORUM

(Send problems in question form to Church Editor; answers will appear in later issue.)

1.—Do you think the various religious denominations will unite during the next five years?

Hear Dr. Cadman on this matter. He says: "I wouldn't want them to do that. It would be a case of marrying in haste and repenting at leasure. Let them get acquainted with each other and unite in common service for great needs, then we shall know that some of the loveliest servants of God are among our Roman Catholic brethren and our Hebrew brethren. I started in thinging God was a Methodist. I have to broaden out."

2.—What may be regarded as the most vital influence against the modern Christian home?

Too many parents are not living the Christian life, as they should live it; they are not setting the example worthy for their children to follow.

The growth of cities, the unparalleled development of all sorts of appliances; now there are a thousand and one interests which did not predominate in the old domestic home; the pulling down of the family altar so that folks don't pray at home, at church or anywhere else; deficiency in the religious education of children on part of parents.

3.—What is the best lesson help?

The Bible itself. The denominational helps are all suggestive and helpful. Snowden's lessons are particularly helpful in Adult classes.

SERMONOGRAMS

Busy hours make short days.

Thinking of others is a good habit.

Practice faithfully what you profess.

That only is important which is eternal.

A food famine is fatal, but what of a spiritual famine?

Until we are willing for God to guide us, we are not willing for God to help us.

The rage and violence of public war—what is it but a suspension of justice among the warring parties.—Hume.

At the harvest the same kind of seed is reaped that was planted. What are you sowing.

A pessimist sees a difficulty in every opportunity. An optimist sees an opportunity in every difficulty.

A Cleveland man reports that he saw carved on a New York Church door the words, "The Gate to Heaven," and below on a sign—"Closed for the summer."

You can kill a man's body and the law will punish you; but you can by word or deed wound his soul nigh unto death and get away with it.

Life is what we are alive to. It is not length but breath. To be alive only to appetite, pleasure, pride, money, making, and not to goodness and kindness, purity and love, history, poetry and music, flowers, stars, God and eternal hope, is all but to be dead.

We have had enough of armchair, pulpit or merely "spoken" Christianity. What is needed is to put Christianity in action on the stage of history, and make it a dominating social force. The trouble with our religion is that it remains an unacted drama in our social life.—L. P. Jacks.

WHAT THE SUNDAY SCHOOL IS STUDYING.

The Memorial Supper—The Meaning of the Communion Service. Luke 22:14-23.

International Lesson for January 18.

By JAMES H. SNOWDEN, D. D.

Memorials have deep and tender significance, and this memorial supper is one of the most important and precious events in the history of our Christian faith and life. We do not know where was this upper room in which the memorial was celebrated; the birthplace of great events are often lost in oblivion. But from this unknown chamber issued a stream of blessing that has flowed down through the ages and will continue to bless the world "till he come."

The Betrayal.

In the evening the little company of Jesus and his disciples gathered in the appointed place and the Passover meal began. As they were sitting down occurred the unseemly strife among the disciples as to who should be greatest, followed by the beautiful condescension and humility of Jesus in washing their feet. Selfishness pushed its ugly presence into this holy hour, and our best movements are often marred with evil suggestions. As they were eating the disciples were startled by the sudden announcement of Jesus: "Behold, the hand that betrayeth me is with me on the table." The unexpected disclosure filled the disciples with alarm. Such baseness excited their horror. Could it be possible there was such treachery lurking among them? "And they began to inquire among themselves, which of them it was that should do this thing," and to say is it I?" They did not begin to point the finger at one another and say, "is it you? Is this baseness lying coiled up in your heart?" Our first impulse often is to think others worse than ourselves, and we may impute to them evil that we never suspect in our own hearts. But there are hidden possibilities of evil in us of which we may be seldom or never conscious, and we need to keep in close acquaintance with our hearts and never assume that we may not be guilty of the deepest sin.

Bread and Cup.

As they were eating the Passover Jesus "took bread and gave thanks and broke it, and gave unto them saying, This is my body which is given for you; this do in remembrance of me. Likewise the cup." The Lord's supper was not an abrupt creation, but a further evolution. The new ordinance grew out of the old and was the fulfillment and perfect blossom of the past. These few simple words are one of the most deeply significant and sacred passages of Scripture. Here we are on holy ground and our meditation should be pervaded with tender reverence. These emblems are rich in ideas. The great central idea is that of sacrifice. The cross has a blood-red heart. The broken bread represents the broken body, and the poured-out cup the shed blood, of Christ. The scarlet thread of sacrifice is woven into the whole web of the universe. The mother lays her life on the altar of sacrifice for her child, and the father will surrender all, even life itself for his wandering boy. These are but drops of sacrifice from the heart of God. The supreme instance of sacrifice is the cross of Calvary on which the Son of God freely gave himself for us. The sign seems insignificant and yet how deeply laden with precious truth it is. The meaning of any sign is not to be measured by the sign itself. The flag of our country is only so much colored silk or cheap muslin, and yet what a mighty meaning does it carry wherever it floats, representing the law and order, the power and majesty, the history and glory of a great nation. A little lock of hair carefully preserved may seem to the undiscerning eye of a stranger of slight significance, but to the bereaved mother it suggests thoughts and memories that are too deep for tears. So this bread and cup may seem common and meaningless to the world, but to believers through all the ages they have been and are precious beyond any other symbol in the world.

Remembrance.

Why did Jesus want to be remembered? Partly for his own sake. He had a human craving for such remembrance and the thought that he would be forgotten and his very name lost in oblivion would have been painful to him. And Jesus wanted us to remember him for our own sake. Memory is one of the ties that bind us to him, a vital artery through which his teaching and influences and life pass into us and become incorporated in our life. How slender and frail seems the thread of continuity and yet how long it has lasted. How perishable are the elements and yet how imperishable is the memorial. This bread and cup are the only material monument Jesus Christ left to his memory. It seems frailer than a spider's web and yet it has survived through all the revolutions of nineteen centuries, outlasting cities and empires. It must have in it some substance and vitality and supreme worth that the world will not let die. It has deep rich roots, but it has not yet come to the perfect blossom and ripe fruit and its greatest significance is yet to be fulfilled.

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes —Most Women Can Have.

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician.

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful subsitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit. 15c and 30c.

Hen Lays All Eggs In House.

Miss Hattie G. Mayo, of Whitman, Mass., reports a hen that during the laying season, regularly comes to the back door and clucks to be let in. When the door is opened it goes up two flights of stairs, lays an egg in a chosen spot used regularly, and then goes down clucking as it goes out the door to tell the glad tidings.

Confirmation of women priests was advocated at a Church Congress in London recently.

This new all-steel model is the leader for 1925. ¶The new Overland Sedan is the lowest priced Sedan in the world with a body entirely of steel. CHURCH ITEMS FROM WORLD

What is thought to be the first organized Bible class taught over the radio was begun at the First Presbyterian church of Dallas, Texas. Ten thousand are enrolled.

There are 7,046 Christian schools and colleges in China with 240,000 students.

The present rate of church accessions in India to the Methodist Episcopal churches is 30,000 annually.

Of the 200 Y. M. C. A. secretaries maintained by the Associations of America in the over-seas service, 104 are located in China.

Church attendance in Korea is two and nine-tenths times its communicant membership, thus having the world's record in church attendance.

The largest church in the world is the Ongole, India, Baptist church in the Telegu country, having a membership of 48,411 with 150,000 under instruction.

Justice Ford, in the controversy between the two branches of the Russian Orthodox Church in this country, has ruled in favor of the older church and against the representative of the church which has recognized the Soviet Government.

The American Education Digest gives the following tabulated percentage 24½c out of every dollar living costs, luxuries 22, waste 14, investment 11c, crime 8½c, government 4½c, schools 1½c, church ¾c. Waste and crime together cost us 30 times as much as the church.

It is not yet forty years since the first Protestant missionary landed in Korea, when there were six Christians in the country. Today they number 300,000, have 3,400 churches, 20,000 pupils in mission schools, and last year treated 250,000 in their hospitals.

According to Dr. John R. Mott "more Moslems visited Paris last year than made the pilgrimage to Mecca, which is an indication of the vast changes taking place in Islam. The Near East looks upon America as the land of hope.

The following may indicate the signs of the times' among the women of the world: In Turkey, women in small but significant numbers have bounded forward politically. Not long since a Japanese woman won a breach of promise suit—which shows an amazing break with the social past of the country. In China the clan family system is gradually breaking down, and there is deep anxiety as to what will take place. Numerous local organizations of women in China concern themselves with the passage of laws dealing with the age of consent, the abolition of prostitution, concubinage, the selling of maid-servants, and foot-binding. In India types of women are emerging which indicate that we may expect in the coming days spiritual leaders, social reformers, writers, altruists, women who in any land would hold a foremost place. In Japan and China women journalists, editors, writers, doctors, philanthropists, bankers, are all in evidence. A Chinese woman attended the International Labor Conference at Geneva in 1921.

LIVE QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

"THE LORD'S SUPPER,
Luke 22:14-23,
For Sunday, January 18th.

1. What previous teachings of Christ should have enabled the disciples to better understand the meaning of the Lord's Supper?
2. Why does eating and drinking furnish such a strong illustration of the indwelling of Christ?
3. In what way may we betray the Lord? What warning does Paul give about communing unworthily? (2 Cor. 11:27). How may we prepare ourselves worthily to partake of the sacrament? 1 Cor. 11:28. What should be our attitude, our thoughts, during the administration of the sacrament?
4. What words in the last prayer with his followers (in the upper room) belong most certainly to ourselves, his last followers?

CLERICUS: The significance of any sign is not to be measured by the nature of the sign itself. The flag of our country is only so much colored silk or cheap muslin, yet what a mighty meaning it carries wherever it floats, representing law and order, the power and majesty, the history and glory of a great nation. A little lock of hair carefully preserved may seem to a stranger a thing of slight significance, but to the bereaved mother it suggests thoughts and memories that are too deep for tears. So this bread and cup may seem meaningless to the world, but to believers they are precious beyond any other symbol in the world. J. H. Snowden says "If Christ is ever forgotten in this world, Christianity will wither and be blown away and itself be forgotten."

Lesson Prayer.

How very many times, dear Lord, we have remembered what thou hast done for us—so lightly. How many times we have approached the communion table with wandering thoughts. Forgive our indifference and divided interests. Open our eyes in our study today that we may see the truth of thy covenant relationship in the broken body and shed blood of our Christ. In thy dear name we pray. Amen.

Periodical Review.

China's Cotton Industry Grows

China, a land of many obsolete industrial activities, has one industry that is almost modern in every sense. It is cotton which is rapidly developing into a major industry. It employs much cheap labor including that of children, of course, but its machinery and methods are up to date. Its greatest weakness is in the scientific management of the factories, but this is being overcome by the bringing in of foreign experts.

Troubled With Pimples Two Years Cuticura Healed

"My skin began to itch and burn and hard, large, red pimples broke out on my face, shoulders and arms. The pimples festered and scaled over and my face looked terrible. My clothing rubbed against the pimples on my shoulders and caused them to bleed. The irritation caused me to scratch the pimples, and the scratching caused terrible eruptions. I lost my rest at night on account of the irritation.

"The trouble lasted about two years before I started using Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after using about five cakes of Soap and one box of Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Miss Imogene Thomas, R. R. 8, Kokomo, Ind., Aug. 2, 1924.

A TISSUE BUILDER

One of the important laws of health is to safeguard the quality of the blood, for good, red blood builds up the tissues. The food we eat and the food our parents ate, is a factor, also the air we breathe day and night, and the kind of water we drink, absolute purity is a requisite, and we owe it to ourselves and to those who come after us to keep the blood pure. A graduate of Philadelphia and Cincinnati Medical Schools was Dr. R. V. Pierce, who early practiced in Pennsylvania, and became famous. He was a student of life problems, and had great faith in Nature's healing through the herbs and roots, such as were used by the Indians, and, after careful analyses of their different qualities, compounded the Golden Medical Discovery, which met with such phenomenal success that a wider field was necessary, and he removed to Buffalo, N. Y., where he became a leading citizen and Representative in Congress, built up a splendid business, and founded the famous Invalids Hotel. Dr. Pierce's name is alone a guarantee of the purity of the Golden Medical Discovery, which has helped thousands for over fifty years, and many unsolicited testimonials bear witness to its value as a tonic.

Sold by all druggists, in liquid or tablet form, or send 10 cents for trial sample to Dr. Pierce's Invalids Hotel, 665 Main Stret, Buffalo, N. Y., and write for free medical advice.

HOME TRAINING

A Good Home Reborn.

John Dey, employed in a large factory—the Truman Manufacturing company, refused to join in the strike because, in the first place he needed the income to suport his widowed mother, and in the second place, there was no good reason for the strike and it might be amicably settled.

John addressed a mass meeting of the employees saying, "If you will come back tomorrow I will see to it that you all get your jobs back." They agreed to return to work.

John Dey had been falsely accused at the beginning of the strike by the superintenednt an ill-tempered man, and because John denied the charge, the superintendent undertook to beat him up, but so utterly failed that he resigned his position the next day.

John Dey who had proven himself fit as a leader because of experiences showing honesty, tact, honorable ambition, with a brotherly spirit, had an interview with the owner of the plant presenting the situation and suggesting the right way of settlement which was accepted by the management.

At a called meeting of employees the terms of settlement were presented by the president and owner and John Dey was announced the new superintendent, news of which not only produced a demonstration of praise and praise and approval but settled all future difficulties.

To John Dey's mother belongs the praise and credit for the changed program in the Truman Manufacturing company, which made possible happy homes for all the employees.

The proportions of Nelson's column in Trafalgar Square, which place in London is dedicated to the famous officer, are still considered huge. The figure of Nelson alone is 17 feet high and the distance from the heel to the toe of the foot is three-quarters of a yard. The total cost was about $250,000, of which $100,000 was raised by popular subscription and the balance voted by parliament.

Rossiter looked down on a foreshortened view of Clarice's face, white now and lips compressed. "You see, Clarice, there is no use wasting your time hating Mrs. Kaime. She is big—she has friends all around her. I'm one of them and I'll see that she doesn't get hurt. . . . There's another thing I want to tell you—this crowd you've been running with are after your money. I'm not naming any one, but there are two men you know who are trying to promote a so-called motion-picture company which is as much of a fake as any wildcat oil scheme. They call themselves motion-picture people. They're not—they want someone with money and no experience whom they can bleed. They know you're going to have plenty of money—you're exactly what those men want, what they call a 'movie-sucker.'"

Rossiter took the paper from her knee, thrust it under his arm, and looked at her sunny head, waves of red-gold tumbled like a child's. He had the perverse desire to smooth it. But he had had his lesson; besides, Clarice's face was set hard, like Dascome's. "When life didn't turn out as Karesia expected it to, she got out and made something of herself, and without any millions to help her, either," he said coolly. "I doubt if you could do it—I like the sort of woman who can."

He turned about, took his box of flowers, and went out.

XXV

After that bit of publicity in one of the Los Angeles dailies life took on a different aspect for Karesia. She was no longer a recluse. How the paper had obtained its information, Karesia did not know, and Rossiter said that he had had no hand in it. Karesia had so carefully avoided everything of the sort. She had hoped intensely that she might remain undiscovered until she had obtained a divorce from Randsome Favrique. As Rossiter had said, she had come to it by degrees, the determination to be free, if possible. It did not matter now, she was not afraid of the reporters who came to her for interviews.

For Rossiter's reappearance had scattered Karesia's plans as completely as a gale scatters dry leaves heaped by a child a play. For five years they had gone their separate ways under a misconception; her letter offering to return to him had never reached him. Each had thought hardly of the other while five years had moulded them into what they were, different beings.

"We have both changed so completely," Karesia told Rossiter again and again.

"You're exactly the same, only more lovable, and I'm a better sort, Kara dear," he urged. "Give me a chance and I'll make you love me as you are capable of loving now, with all the devotion in you, the sort of thing that has faith and forgives."

He had gained in character; Karesia granted it; he had lost none of his charm, yet he was resolute and capable. He would always have the actor's temperament; Jules Favrique and his father before him had been bred on the stage. But there was Rossiter blood in him as well, the "thrifty, solid bourgeois," as he had characterized his uncle Rossiter. The fascinating, tempestuous young man in whom Karesia had lost faith had developed into a man of affairs.

Karesia told Rossiter that she was determined upon one thing; she must love completely the man to whom she gave herself; it was the only foundation for marriage. When no older than Clarice, she had married Edward Kaime, her father's friend, a man more than twice her age, simply because she was orphaned and desolate and he had loved her. She had known no better. When widowed, Rossiter had swept into her life, an utter stranger, but vivid with youth and charm, gaiety and love—and she had married him. By a single act, he had shocked her into flight. She had not loved him, or she would have clung to him and have forgiven; she had loved only his youth and charm; she had made her second great mistake. And he had loved her after the same fashion, not deeply, or he would have followed her in spite of everything. Their structure had crumbled as soon as a puff of wind had struck it, for it had no real foundation. She told Rossiter so.

"We didn't build very well," he agreed, "but we're going to do better next time." He refrained from many caresses, but he kissed her then, both tenderly and passionately. "In spite of everything you have been the one real love of my life, and you did love me dearly. Both you and I have thought that there might be someone else whom we could love, but we were mistaken."

Karesia flushed warmly enough under his caress; she flushed at the oblique reference to Dascome, too. . . . It was an odd pact between husband and wife; their respective houses faced each other and between them was the cleft of canyon. Rossiter asserted no claim; he courted her as he had five years before, only more resolutely, less tempestuously, a devoted lover. It was chivalrous; it was lovable. It appealed to Karesia; she felt that it would end in her crossing the canyon, fulfilling her promise made five years ago, of "for better or for worse." Yet the ache deep within her did not wear away; life seemed to be closing in on her instead of widening. Her increasing activities, the social life into which Rossiter led her, was a pleasant surface matter; beneath it was unrest.

She was busy enough, no time for brooding. A few days had been sufficient for her house-settling, and the diminutive Japanese who padded about her house during the day and withdrew to his own menage at night was a comfort. To Karesia's joy, he proved an excellent chauffeur as well. Herbert Colt had telegraphed from San Francisco: "Have a clue to your paintings. Don't worry, I'll get them for you in time."

That was a satisfaction and it was a great satisfaction to destroy Mary Bliss' scant wardrobe and outfit her in new clothes, dainty silk things which Mary Bliss handled lovingly. Karesia discovered that Mary Bliss was skilful with a needle and that as long as there was a pile of sewing beside her she was content. At first she had trouble with her poor stiff hands, but Karesia herself massaged them and put her to bed with medicated gloves, which soon softened the callouses. Then Mary Bliss' gnarled hands began to look less pitiful.

Huntington W. Va., Critic Lauds Comedy Success, "Meet Wife"

Farce, Brimming With Mirth Provoking Situations, Comes to Ceramic Theatre Next Thursday.

Referring to the comedy success, "Meet the Wife," which comes to the Ceramic here next Thursday evening, the Huntington, W. Va., Herald Dispatch says:

"Meet the Wife," developed the fact before the doubly appreciative audience at the Huntington theatre last night, that there is occasionally something new in comedy plots. It merited a capacity house.

"It is doubtful if there has ever been presented in this city a farce of such a thoroughly delightful character or one so brimming with mirth provoking situations. And the principals in the cast are fully up to every situation.

"When two husbands married to the same woman meet on common ground that which eventuates usually creates an interesting scene. None can forsee just what either will do, but here the author has taken this selfsame situation and turned it deftly into one of the most perfect vehicles of laughter imaginable.

"In commenting on this play one must pay tribute to Augusta Boylston as the twice-married and bossy wife; Donald Campbell as the browbeaten second husband and Messenger Bellis as the first husband who deserted the matrimonial craft in an earthquake for the great world of liberty.

"The story on which the play is based is clever and scintillates with exceptional situations. Husband number two stumbles, through the machinations of Fate, into the home of husband number one, directed and managed, of course by the wife of both. The men become good friends until husband number two has the bombshell of revelation exploded beneath him. He, feeling that had his predecessor not run away from friend wife, he, himself would be a free agent, glorying in the liberty he wanted but didn't have the courage to take. But the humor of the situation strikes them and they laugh it off.

"Augusta Boylston is a charming woman who has carried an undeniably wonderful personality behind the footlights and in the role of the bossy wife who insists on ruling or ruining, she keeps her audience in the throes of merriment constantly. At times one finds just a hint of suggestiveness in the situations and lines but it it such perfectly natural suggestiveness that one feels no sense of resentment—not even the most finicky.

THRIFT WEEK OBSERVED HERE

Building Association and Postal Department Co-operate.

Local organizations are co-operating in the annual observance of Thrift week which began today and will close next Friday.

The Ohio Building Association League and the postoffice department aer taking part in the observance which is nation-wide in scope. Postmaster Edwin McClure has been asked to point out to the public the advantages of thrift during the present campaign and encourage the use of the postal Savings department.

The postal Savings department, of which every postoffice is a depository, differs from the ordinary savings banks. A depositor may deposit any amount from $1 to $2,500 at any time. Deposits are evidenced in non-negotiable and non-transferable certificates and draw interest at the rate of two per cent a year. Deposits are payable to the depositor upon demand at the postoffice at which the account is kept. Withdrawals may also be made by mail.

Amounts less than $1 may be saved by purchasing postal savings stamps at 10 cents each. A postal savings card with 10 savings stamps will be accepted as a deposit of $1 either in opening a new account or in adding to an existing one, or it may be redeemed in cash. Accounts may be transferred from one postoffice to another without loss of interest or without cost to the depositor.

The Ohio Building Association League, of which local building and loan associations are members, is especially interested in Thrift Day, Tuesday, January 20; Own Your Own Home Day, Wednesday, January 21, and Safe Investment Day, Friday, January 23.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS
BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Old Enough To Decide.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young woman 24 years old. I am very unhappy. About three years ago I met a young man about my age, but I did not go with him many times as I did not care for him. Shortly after this I met another young man, two years older than I am. I am still keeping company with him and love him very much. He has asked me to marry him several times, but I didn't know what to do. My parents want me to marry the other man because he is wealthy. They have some fault to find with every young man I go with. My father told me that I could not come home if I married the second young man. But he is very kind to me. He has no bad habits. My mother would hardly know him if she saw him. Please advise me what to do. F. A. R.

At the age of 24 you are old enough to follow the dictates of your own heart. I think that three years has been quite a test of your love and since you and the young man still care for each other and want to marry now, you should not let any one stand in the way of your love. When parents are fair in their criticisms they should be heeded, but when they are unjust and unreasonable their stand in the matter should be disregarded. A girl knows in her own heart, as a rule, when her parents are fair. So often a mother and father do everything in their power to prevent their daughter's marriage to a selfish, worthless man, only to be ignored by the daughter. In the end, however, she pays dearly for her willfulness. Look into the future, my dear, and if you feel sure you have found the man you want for a life mate, marry him.

A Lonely Youth.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been in this town eight months and have never had a date with any girl here. Several people where I am staying have asked if I never go out. I just don't know anybody. I am not the kind to go up and ask a girl if I don't know her. Until now I have had many friends wherever I have been. How can I get acquainted, as I am awfully lonesome? LONELY.

No doubt the people with whom you are associated are busy with their own affairs and they don't stop to realize that you are a stranger and lonely and that a kind word would mean a lot to you. When people mention the fact that you do not go anywhere, say frankly that you are not acquainted here and that you have no place to go. Also say that you would appreciate a few introductions and help in making friends. Look about you at your place of business and if you see some girl who appeals to you cultivate her friendship. She will not consider an introduction necessary inasmuch as you and she work at the same place. It is also possible to meet people through the social activities in a church.

Flying light aeroplanes will in ten years time be the sport of youth, is the prediction of Sir Charles Wakefield, a pioneer aviator of England.

Ben Franklin and the Servant Problem

"If you would have a servant that you like, serve thyself," said Ben Franklin, whose birthday we celebrate today.

While giving voice to this wisdom, Ben went right on with his electrical experiments, and all unknowingly paved the way to the modern homemaker to serve herself with ease and simplicity. Electrical appliances such as the washer, the vacuum cleaner and the ironing machine, are the present day servants in the home.

Ben Franklin would like this new order of things because it's thrifty. Every electrical device you use means thrift of money, time and labor.

Letters Like This Prove the Reliability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Turtle Lake, Wisconsin. — "I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness, backache and nervousness. I had these troubles for years and had taken other medicines for them, but I have found no medicine so good as the Vegetable Compound and I recommend it to my friends who have troubles similar to mine. I saw it advertised and thought I would try it and it has helped me in all my troubles. I have had six children and I have taken the Lydia E. Pinkham Vegetable Compound before each one was born, for weakness, vomiting, poor appetite and backache, and again after childbirth because of dizzy headaches. It is a good medicine for it always helps me. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills for the last eight years for constipation." — Mrs. MABEL LA POINT, R. F. D. No. 1, Turtle Lake, Wisconsin.

In a recent canvass, 98 out of every 100 women say they were benefited by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Runyon Says

Damages Due to Improper Hitting.
Dempsey Is Not Apt to Retire.
They Will Offer Too Much Money.
More Than UNDEFEATED.
Benny Leonard's Case Is Different.

By DAMON RUNYON.
(Copyright, 1925, by International Feature Service.)

JACK DEMPSEY, heavyweight champion, talks of retiring.

Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, talks of retiring.

That is, perhaps, quite true.

But the boxing game has changed. Heretofore few champions gathered enough money to bulwark their finances stoutly enough to resist the temptation of one more 'big shot."

Nowadays provident champions can feather their nests early in their title careers. By the time they have held their titles as long as Dempsey and Leonard they should be well fixed.

The writer is not sure that if he were either Dempsey or Leonard, or any one of the other title holders who have had their titles long enough to turn them into bank accounts, he wouldn't think seriously of retiring.

In the cases of Dempsey and Leonard it is a human impulse, also largely a BUSINESS impulse.

Let us see.

Dempsey undoubtedly has enough money put aside to bring him an income of a couple hundred dollars per week as long as he lives.

That satisfies Dempsey. He has no extravagant tastes.

Leonard is undoubtedly similarly situated financially. Leonard, like Dempsey, is not extravagant.

They both have had considerable experience on the stage and in motion picture work.

It is conceivable that as retired and undefeated champions they could both go along for years retaining something of their old drawing power, enough to add materially to the income from their investments.

It has been many years since Jack McAuliffe, light weight champion of the world, saw the shadow of YOUTH across his pugilistic path, and retired undefeated.

McAuliffe's day was long before the day of big purses. He was a great fighter, but he had little opportunity to realize on his ability anything for his old age.

But through all the years since McAuliffe's retirement that item UNDEFEATED has been a big asset to him. It has enabled him to make a living in theatrical work, and otherwise, when other former holders of that same title were having a hard struggle because they had retired only after being DEFEATED.

Perhaps the fact that McAuliffe was one of the very few retired and undefeated champions of prize ring history, therefore a novelty, made him an attraction.

Probably men who had known him in his pugilistic prime liked to see him at intervals, to muse on the halcyon days of yore, to dream dreams of their own puissant youth.

We all get that way as the years slide by.

We all like to see the figures we knew in our young, glowing days, to remark to our neighbor, "What'd he done to so-and-so when he was good?"

There's something in that word UNDEFEATED.

It brings a man into current argument. It keeps him a living figure.

If Dempsey and Leonard retired now, ten years from now all of us would be looking at the lightweights and heavyweights of the day with contempt, and telling the younger generation:

"Why, Jack or Benny, would have made mincemeat of them in no time!"

If you should tell them now that Jim Jeffries, or Ad Wolgast would have made mincemeat of the current crop in the lightweight and heavy weight divisions, their answer would be that Johnson beat Jeffries, and Ritchie beat Wolgast.

Jeffries missed a great chance to become a fistic immortal by not remaining in retirement after he once retired.

They lured him forth with a fat purse. He fell before a man he might, have in his prime, have defeated. No one remembers that Jeffries was old and tired when he met Johnson. They remember only that he was DEFEATED.

Jeffries is said to be "broke." As the UNDEFEATED champion he would still have a distinct asset. As an "ex" in the world to be a novelty.

There is a limit to the common sense of retirement. The distinction UNDEFEATED will not be worth what Dempsey will get when the time comes.

Leonard's case is different. In the first place, there is the question as to whether Leonard can ever again make the lightweight poundage of 135 pounds, without completely sacrificing not only every chance of winning, but his health as well.

In the second place, Leonard cannot command the Dempsey price, or anything like it. He can get no more in a chunk than he can earn outside the ring in a few years UNDEFEATED. Once beaten, Leonard for the time being at least, loses easily 50 per cent of his present value.

Jack Johnson got $30,000 for his end when he lost his title to Jess Willard.

Johnson could probably be making that much yearly had he retired UNDEFEATED.

He was a strong drawing card for some time after he came back to the United States and served his term in Leavenworth. Had he quit the ring as champion he would still be "packing 'em in."

His $30,000 long since has taken

Delaney Knocks Out Tiger; Offered Scrap With Greb

Uppercut in Second Round Puts Colored Boxer Out of the Running.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Kindly omit flowers.

This request of the heirs and assigns, so frequently mentioned in connection with the obsequies, was duly observed shortly after 10 o'clock last night when Flowers was omitted, excluded and otherwise discontinued by a right hand punch to the jaw from Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., after 42 seconds of fighting in the second round.

That was all there was to it—a punch, a fall, a convulsive writhe or so and as a contender for the middleweight championship of the world, Tiger Flowers, colored gentleman of Atlanta, Ga., was no more. Delaney had punctured the bubble with the rapier point of his good right hand.

The omission of flowers followed automatically. The brunette specimen was to have bet Allentown Joe Gans at Allentown, Pa., on Monday night next, but the promoters went into reverse, coincident with the knockout, and substituted Delaney.

Lifted to the watch tower of public esteem by his quick victories over several opponents and the almost theatrical ferocity of his mien, the colored gent was matched with Delaney as the final "convincer" for a shot at Harry Greb's title. Delaney will take over that end of the business also. You couldn't keep Delaney out of a championship match now with a ball and chain. Greb, it was announced, had agreed to meet the winner, previous to last night's frolic.

At the time, it was fondly expected that Flowers would be a candidate, in spite of reports that he sported a glass jaw. On the face of the returns, this allegation may or may not have been substantiated. All that I can offer on the subject is that if it isn't Dresden China, neither is it Sheffield plate.

Granting that Delaney flourishes a natty sock, the fact remains that Flowers went out too suddenly to leave an impression of adequate invulnerability. He has all the stage trappings, from the Tiger head on his bathrobe to the multi-colored bouquet on his fighting trunks. He has the snarl of the jungle cat on his lips and the swiftness of its "strike" in his arms; everything, in fact, but a competent chin. This last probably will make the omission of Flowers a more or less permanent institution.

At that, the Tiger possibly had two strikes on him at the outset. A left hander sent against a right hand puncher, he seemed to be made to measure for Delaney as they stepped out at the gong. Jack stood straight up and as he danced away from Flowers' rushes, held the negro off with a straight left. Occasionally he stopped and crossed with a right. The Tiger had no adequate reply to these tactics and took to slapping at his man as one might treat a pestiferous fly. It was Delaney's round, what there was of it.

The Tiger evidently was given fresh instructions in his corner for he came out with a rush and proceeded to mix it merrily. Swarming all over his man. This was a mistake. One might as well trade punches with a corba as to mix with Delaney. In that style of fighting, the sharp shooter always wins.

For a moment the Bridgeport entry seemed dazed by the rush; then he quickly shot over a straight right to the chin and before Flowers could blink his eyes followed with a right uppercut, flush on the "button." The colored man fell forward in a slow collapse, rolled over on his back and attempted to rise at the count of seven.

But the effort was too much and he fell back to take the rest of the count, as is.

BETHANY, W. Va., June 17—Nine Bison basketball men, their coach and manager left Bethany this morning for Marietta where they are to play the Marietta College passers tonight on the Pioneer floor. All of Coach McCandless' men are in good shape and are confident that they will be able to annex a victory from the Ohio quintet tonight.

The Bethany Freshmen will stage their first home game for this season tonight when they battle St. Anthony's passers from Steubenville in the Irvin Gym. Coach Latto will start the game with following lineup: forwards, Reese and Wailes; center, Idleman; guard, Hamilton and House.

LAUGHLINS AND TROTTERS WIN

Defeat Potters and No. 5 in Shop League Games.

Laughlin 6 and Trotters were winners in last night's "Y" industrial basketball league engagements. The No. 6 passers continued their winning streak at the expense of the Potters, 27 to 25, while the Trotters had it easy with Laughlin 5, the count being 28 to 10.

The Laughlin-Potters contest was one of the best engagements of the season, neither squad having more than a five-point edge at any occasion. The Laughlin aggregation had two points of a margin at the end of the first half, the score being 14 to 12.

The final half was fought just as heatedly as the first and the score was just as close in the closing minutes as it was in the first. Webb, Martin, Jester and Greenawalt were the star performers for Laughlin 6 while Wain, Guyton and Zuck were the mainstays of the Potters.

The Trotter outfit had little trouble to speak of in their game with Laughlin 5. They topped their rivals by the count of 10 to 3 at the end of the first half. The distance between the teams lengthened even more in the second half. Beeler, McVey, Watson and McConville did most of the heavy work for the Trotters while Berg and Manypenny performed well for the Laughlins.

PUSEY REGULAR ON KISKI QUINT

Pusey has landed a first string berth on the Kiski basketball five and from all indications he'll hold it for the remainder of the season. He has revealed all the ability which made him a big factor in many of the East Liverpool victories of recent years when he was a member of the Blue and White.

LISBON TEAMS HERE TONIGHT

Boone's Charges Confident of Victory Over County Seaters.

With little opportunity for good sound rest after their harrowing contest last night with Cambridge, which the Guernsey countains won, 22 to 20, Coach O. V. Boone's high school basketballers are expected back in East Liverpool early this afternoon.

Tonight they will go into action, facing the Lisbon school quintet on the local floor.

The game should give the locals an even break in the week-end schedule. The team, as a whole, is confident of victory.

The girls teams of the two schools will put on the preliminary, which will start at 7:15 p. m.

Coach Boone, in a recent statement, asserted that every effort will be made to start the game on the time announced.

Last Night's Fights

CHAMP ADMITS HE WILL MARRY

Dempsey and Screen Actress Expect to Wed June 1.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 17.—Using the parlance of the squared ring where he is champion of them all, Jack Dempsey admitted again today there was no use sparring any longer and reaffirmed his announcement of yesterday that he and Estelle Taylor, silver screen actress, would be married, probably June 1. The champion frankly admitted that he and the film star are engaged and said they would be wed as soon as Miss Taylor completes her present film work.

Just where the ceremony will take place was problematical today, but according to friends close to the pair in all probability it will be at Lake Louise, in Canada.

Both Miss Taylor and Dempsey had only endearing terms to speak of each other.

Dempsey said "Miss Taylor is a most wonderful little girl and it is with pride that I admit out engagement is a fact."

The actress' comment for Dempsey was likewise endearing.

ROAMERS DOWN CHURCH PASSERS

In a well played game last night, the Roamers basketball five won from the First Presbyterian Juniors by the score of 24 to 18. Both teams were even at the end of the first half, the score being 13 to 13.

In the second half, the Roamers took the lead from their opponents and were ahead 16 to 15, at the end of the third quarter, and in the last quarter easy outplayed the Juniors.

Bloor, Lindell, Bailey and Congrove were the stars for the Roamers while Felt, Blazer and Todd performed the best of the Presbyterian Juniors. Lineup and summaries:

Roamers.		Juniors.
Bloor	F	Felt

Locals Outscore Guernsey County Team in Field Goals, But Lose Out on Free Throws; Record Crowd Witnesses Engagement.

CAMBRIDGE, Jan. 17.—Cambridge high school passers defeated East Liverpool's scholastic five, 22 to 20, last night in a nerve shattering contest that shadowed any contest of a similar nature seen here in recent years.

The Ceramic City aggregation, living up to advance notices, played the finest brand of basketball witnessed on the local court this year.

The visitors were strong at the outset, jumping into the lead and holding it until the end of the first quarter when the count stood 12 to 7.

The second period was waged on nearly equal terms, with the Cambridge lads climbing a few notches in the race.

In the third period, the Cambridge defense, which had been slow in getting into action at the start of the game, tightened and held up the East Liverpool advance while the Cambridge forwards launched an assault upon the East Liverpool baskets which was highly effective. At the end of the quarter the Cambridge quint was leading, 18 to 17.

The record breaking crowd of fans were on thei rfeet through the final period as the two teams fought for supremacy. A single field goal gave the Cambridge boys victory as the game ended.

The lineup:

Proposes Elimination Bouts.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Tex Rickard declared his intention today of applying to the state Athletic commission for permission to award a championship belt to the winner of the bout between Sammy Mandell and Sid Terris at Madison Square Garden on February 6, as the first step in determining the successor to Benny Leonard, retiring lightweight champion. The Mandell-Terris bout would be the forerunner, he said, of a series of elimination meetings, such as was conducted recently in the featherweight division. He added that the championship belt could be passed along from winner to winner, as they developed.

MAXWELL

No Better Material In Any Car at Any Price

The sturdy qualities that make the good Maxwell so durable and dependable are the natural results of materials and methods of manufacture usually associated with cars of far higher price.

There are approximately 38 fast wearing parts in all automobiles. Irrespective of price there is nothing superior to the good Maxwell at those 38 points.

More expensive alloy steels are used in the good Maxwell than in many cars selling for twice or thrice as much.

Furthermore, the group of engineers who share credit for the advancement and perfection of the good Maxwell—the same group that designed the Chrysler Six—has practically eliminated all vibration. This is a refinement of operation hitherto assumed to be impossible with a four-cylinder car.

Every penny you invest in the good Maxwell will work for you overtime. It is apparent from the testimony of its owners that it is actually a better car than anything at anywhere near its price.

We are pleased to extend the convenience of time-payments. Ask about Maxwell's attractive plan.

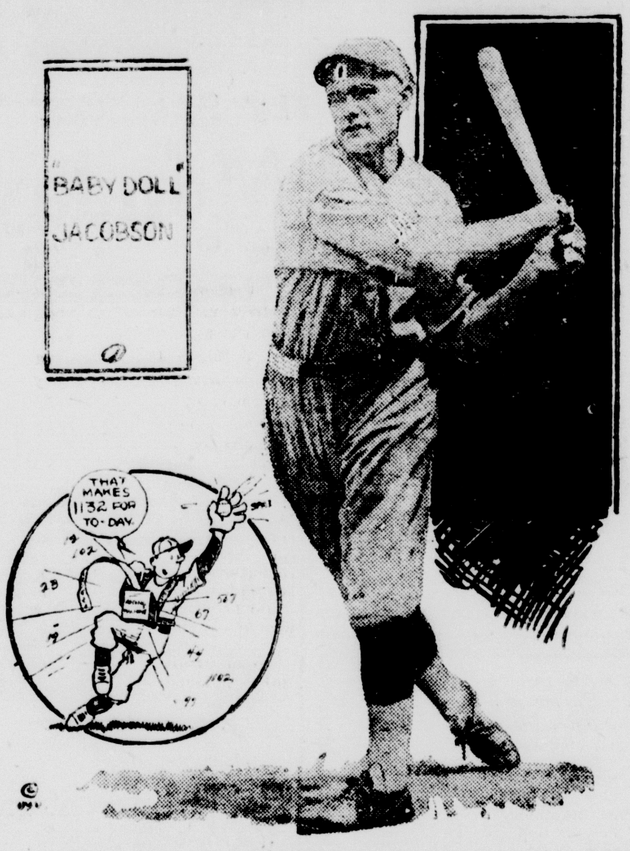
The Good MAXWELL

This "Baby Doll" Gets 'Em



Big Bill Jacobson, 200 pounds and more firm than fast afoot, bears the title of "Baby Doll," because he is far from one. But none of these things kept him from setting a major league record for outfielders in putouts last year for the Browns. And he is waiting to better that mark next season.

CHICAGO HAILS PAAVO NURMI

Finn Adds Another Scalp to Belt; Returns to New York.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—Chicago today hailed a new champion—Paavo Nurmi who last night on the Coliseum track added another scalp to his already well laden belt.

Nurmi ran, or rather ambled 12 miles in the special feature of the I. A. C. sport carnival one fifth of a second better than he had legged the same distance in New York, on Thursday night.

The Finn turned the one and one quarter miles in 5-354-5 and the one and one half in 6:444-5, his record work being done in the last half mile. His time for the mile, 4:26.

Joie Ray ran, too, but he was 85 yards behind the famous Nurim at the finish. Joie gave everything he had but was no competition to the flying Haddie.

Nurmi took the track after a day and night ride on the train from New York. He shook hands with Ray, stood erect and kept that posture throughout the race. Head up, chest out, knee caps that looked like baseballs, out too.

After the race, Nurmi ran for a train, made it and after another day and night ride expects to hang up some more track records in New York tonight.

Runyon Says:

In the twenty-seven years since he lost the title Corbett has probably wings. "Lil Artha" probably hasn't much to show for it.

Only one man has made any considerable money as an "ex" on the strength of his old reputation.

That man is James J. Corbett.

made more money than any fighter in the history of the ring.

This does not take account of his earnings as champion, you understand. It includes only what he has made, with his pugilistic reputation figuring in the matter.

To his reputation as ex-champion, it is true that Corbett has added much of his ability as an actor. But, even so, the public memory of his pugilistic prowess remains an important factor in his drawing power.

Would that power, in Corbett's case, have been any greater had Corbett retired undefeated?

The writer thinks so.

Rings on Trees Bear Definite Relation to Amount of Rainfall

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan.—There is a definite relation between the annual rings on trees and the amount of rainfall, according to Dr. A. E. Douglass, director of the Steward Observatory here. During observations over a period of twenty years, Dr. Douglass worked out the probable variations of the sun in the last four or five centuries. The discovery may aid materially in increasing accuracy of long-range weather forecasts, he believes.

W. VA. MATMEN OPEN TONIGHT

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Jan. 17.—West Virginia University will begin its fifth season of intercollegiate wrestling at the "Ark" here this evening when Mountaineer matmen go against grapplers representing Western Maryland college of Westminster, Md.

Coach Hall is bringing a veteran squad here for the match and the Mountaineers are not expected to make a sweep of the bouts as they did in winning 25-0 last year.

Most every one looks for Farmer to be West Virginia's 115-pound man with either Stickler or "Red" Meade meeting Rawlings, of Western Maryland, in the 115.

In the 135-pound division West Virginia will have its ace, Al Millender, who has not been defeated in a collegiate bout since his first appearance on the mat in 1923. After losing his first start Millender went on the warpath and in the matches that have followed he has been a consistent winner on falls.

Ward Wylie, another veteran, will probably oppose the Maryland star, Tozzie, who was captain of the team last year. Either Captain Sudor or Hobansack, the latter a football man, will be Harrick's choice for 158-pound duty. The light heavyweight berth is still open, according to reports. Ezra Pitsenberger, 175-pound star for several seasons, will be used in the unlimited class.

"BIG LEAGUE" GOLFERS PLAY

Florida Professional Loop Gets Under Way.

By ROBERT E. BARLOW.

PASADENA, ON THE GULF, Fla., Jan. 17—Big league golf got away to a flying start today when for the first time in the history of the game two teams of crack golfers met in the first game of the Florida professional golf league.

Walter Hagen and Joe Kirkwood, Pasadena, world famous pair, were opposed by Gene Sarazen and Leo Diegel, Hollywood, in an 18-hole match over the course of the Boca Ciega golf and country club links here. It was fitting that Hagen, long the dominant figure in international professional golf, should be included in the first big league game in golf.

Hagen and Kirkwood played the last nine at Boca Ciega in 33 strokes each, with every putt holed as their last workout for today's game and Sarazen and Diegel went over the course this morning and found it a championship test of golf in every way.

League officials announced today that the second game would be played at Tampa tomorrow when the Hollywood pair will play Johnny Farrell and Bobby Cruikshank, the fast Tampa team. The complete league schedule will be announced next week. Each team will play a home game with each team.

The following teams are members: Orlando has made an offer to MacDonald Smith and in the event of being able to get a team fast enough to compete with the other teams, will be admitted.

REVIVAL MEETS CONTINUE HERE

Evangelist R. G. Wilkin Speaks at Oakland Church.

Evangelist R. G. Wilkin of Freeport, Ill., spoke to another large audience last evening at the Oakland Free Methodist church. His subject was "The Convictive Ministry of the Comforter." It was based on the story of Abraham's servant traveling from Caanan to Mesopotamia in search of a wife for Isaac.

He spoke in part as follows:

"God has sent forth the Holy Spirit into the world to call out the church, the bride of Christ. He makes his appeal to the human heart as Abraham's servant asked Rebecca for a dring of water. She consented to the request by saying, "Drink my Lord." Happy the one that yields to the wooing voice. The next moment the vital test comes in the question, "Will You Go With This Man?" They start across the great Syrian desert, a type of the earthly experience of the Christian. So the Holy Spirit will guide the yielded and obedient disciple until at the close of life's day he shall meet his divine Isaac, the Lord Jesus Christ."

PASTOR TO PREACH SPECIAL SERMON

Rev. W. C. Stokes, pastor of the Pennsylvania Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, will preach the first of a special series of sermons tomorrow evening. His subject will be: "The Kind of a Revival This Church Needs." The colored jubilee singers will have a part in the program. Philip Pryor will render several vocal solos.

Rev. Harry G. Kaye will speak at the services tomorrow in the Pennsylvania Avenue Church of Christ where he is conducting revival meetings. Evangelist R. G. Wilkin of Freeport, Ill., will preach in the Oakland Free Methodist church. Pastors will be in charge of the services at the other churches of this section of the city.

Revival Meetings.

Rev. Storey, who is conducting revival meetings at the Second Baptist church, will deliver a special sermon tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. It will be for men and women.

Legislation Framed.

Beaver county legislators will leave tomorrow for Harrisburg where the regular sessions will open Monday. Number of bills have been framed by members for presentation to the general assembly dealing with matters of vital interest to the county.

Industrial Accidents Many.

James J. Davis, secretary of labor, says that while accurate statistics on industrial accidents are very difficult to obtain, it is a fair estimate that there are 2,453,418 industrial accidents of all kinds annually. The resulting wage loss is over a billion dollars, he estimates. The Department of Labor may undertake research work to classify and compile more accurate information if authority is granted.

When it was intimated that women medical students might be barred from St. Mary's Hospital in London recently, women of the city rose in protest and won their demands.

Haitian Labor Cheap

Unskilled labor in Haitian cities is comparatively cheap, the most common callings paying about 20 cents per day. Shoemakers, wood workers, tailors and similar craftsmen make $5 to $25 a month, while bank employes earn $70 a month. Administrative employes get $50 to $100 monthly, and domestic servants $3 to $6 monthly, cooks getting a few dollars higher pay. On the other hand the common laborer in Haiti can feed himself for about ten cents a day.

Post cards upon which can be typed the message and address without removing them from the typewriter, have been invented in Germany.

PERCY FROST KILLS HIMSELF

INTER-CITY DRY SQUAD WAR ENDS IN TRAGEDY AS MAN TAKES POISON

STORM OF INDIGNATION AGAINST TACTICS OF OUTSIDERS SWEEPS CITY

Grewsome Climax Marks Week of Raids in Which Steubenville Detectives, Working for 10 Per Cent of Fines Assessed in Liquor Law Cases, Played Conspicuous Roles.

As a result of worry over his arrest by Wellsville police on a charge of illegally possessing liquor in the inter-city prohibition officers' war, Percy Thomas Frost, 64, local representative for the Hanovia Chemical company, Newark, N. J., color importers, committed suicide by drinking a quantity of chloroform at his home, 163 Pennsylvania avenue, at 2 o'clock this morning.

Physicians attribute his death to paralysis of the heart, caused by the poison.

Since his arrest last Wednesday afternoon, when a Wellsville squad, under orders of Chief of Police John Fultz, seized six bottles of home brew at his home, Frost has appeared to be in a dejected frame of mind. He was taken before Mayor James Barnes of Wellsville, following his arrest, and fined $1,000 and costs, which Wellsville police claim he made arrangements to pay.

When Frost retired last night, members of his family say he appeared to be greatly concerned because of the notoriety connected with his arrest. About 1:30 o'clock this morning, his wife, who has been ill for the last several weeks and was occupying an adjoining room, hear moans from her husband's chamber and arose to investigate. She found her husband unconscious in bed.

Mrs. Frost's efforts to arouse him failed. She succeeded in dragging him from the bed to the floor, and then ran from the house and screamed for neighbors, who reached the home within a few minutes.

Leaves Two Notes.

Dr. M. D. McCutcheon was summoned and shortly after him Dr. Albert Michaels arrived. Stomach pumps were used in an effort to remove the poison, but without result. Mr. Frost died within a few minutes after the arrival of the physicians.

On the dresser in Mr. Frost's room was an ounce bottle, labeled "Chloroform," with its contents about half gone. The belief is expressed that the victim of the tragedy took the poison before he retired. Physicians say that the chloroform taken from the bottle was not sufficent to have caused death, but that the poison effected his weakened heart.

Two notes was found in the bed chamber. One was addressed to his wife and the other to his son, Dr.

Dry Chief Turns "Thumbs Down" on Invading Raiders

CINCINNATI, Jan. 17—Following a conference between state prohibition commissioner B. F. McDonald of Columbus and police chief William Copelan of this city it was announced late Friday that Cincinnati police, instead of deputies from village liquor courts, will make "dry' arrests in Hamilton county'. The state will receive half of the fines imposed by the local municipal court. This is the plan that is being tried out in other Ohio counties.

REV. B. R. JOHNSON SCORES IMPORTATION OF DETECTIVES FOR LIQUOR RAIDS HERE

Condemnation of the importation of private detectives as well as the invasion of private homes in the prohibition enforcement officers' war swept East Liverpool and Wellsville today, following the death of Percy Frost.

"Dismiss all imported help" was the demand voiced as news of the tragedy reached the far corners of the district. On all sides, tribute was paid the high standing of Mr. Frost in the community, while messages of sympathy poured into the late home.

Rev. B. R. Johnson, pastor of the First Church of Christ, who was at Mr. Frost's bedside when death came, issued a signed statement in which he insists that "law must function through the established and constituted forces," and urges that "we look after our own affairs and as citizens unite to make a decent community and to create a higher respect for the law."

Mr. Frost a Good Man.

Rev. Mr. Johnson said:

"The tragic and untimely death of my friend and neighbor, Mr. Percy Frost, calls for some word of sympathy to the family and a word of explanation to the public. To say that the good citizens of our city feel keenly about the death of this good man is only half right. We feel that a wrong has been committed against a home, against a life, and against the spirit of prohibition.

"Every one in this and neighboring communities knows full well that the writer has never been and is not now in sympathy with the traffic in liquor. We all know that our laws are being violated. We have thugs, bootleggers and criminals. But Percy Frost was not in this class.

Urges Sober Thinking

He was human and as such bore the weaknesses of the race. Mr. Frost was a good man and never did he violate the laws of his country or overstep the proprieties of decency and good citizenship. We cannot understand why a man's home has to be entered and a sick wife molested by a raiding party when violent crimes in high and low places go on undisturbed.

"Feeling is high today among our

Coolidge Plans Shake-up Because Of Haynes' Methods

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—A shakeup in the federal prohibition bureau with the present director, Roy A. Haynes, being succeeded by a more vigorous type of official, was forecast here today as a part of the general re-organization of administrative officers under President Coolidge.

Whether Haynes will actually be ousted or not remains to be seen, but it did become definitely known that President Coolidge is not satisfied with enforcement methods now prevailing.

The President's dissatisfaction is said to be due to the fact that too much attention is paid to small offenders against the dry laws, "Hip Toters" and casual revellers, and not enough to ferreting out the big rings and combinations that have reduced bootlegging to the basis of an organized industry.

HOOSIER WHO MADE MILLIONS AT 37 VICTIM OF PNEUMONIA

ONCE RAILROADER

Student of Economics and Spectacular in Wall Street Deals.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17. — Daniel G. Reid, the 'tin plate king", died today of pneumonia. He was 66 years old.

Reid had been virtually an invalid for the past four years. He became ill, and Monday his ailment was diagnosed as pneumonia.

At midnight he began sinking rapidly.

Reid's career was one of the most remarkable in the realm of finance. At 25, he was a division superintendent on the Pennsylvania railorad. At 37 he had acquired a fortune of $30,000,000.

Worked for Pennsylvania.

Reid was born in Mu[illegible], Ind., in 1858. When, as a young man he was working for the Pennsylvania, he was an enthusiastic student of economics and business.

When the McKinley tariff became a law, the young "railroader" saw a splendid opportunity to make money. With William B. Leeds and William H. and James H. Moore, he organized the American Tin Plate company.

This stroke of business genius brought him the $30,000,000 at the time he was 37.

Interest in Tobacco Products

After Reid acquired his immense fortune in the tin-plate business, the United States Steel Corporation took it over. The organizers, with John W. Gates, who was also interested, received $120,000,000 in stock in the steel corporation.

Other big business in the organizing of which Reid had a prominent part, were the American Can Company and Tobacco Products company.

He created a sensation in the financial world by getting control of the Rock Island Railroad at the time Gates got hold of the Louisville and Nashville.

ROME QUIET AS MUSSOLINI WINS

ROME, Jan. 17.—Despite the expected vote of confidence, 303 to 33, accorded to Premier Mussolini last night when the opposition presented its resolution attacking his election program, the attacks on former Premiers Giolitti and Orlando, opposing leaders, had had the effect today of solidifying the elements lined up against the fascist premier.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Public order has not been disturbed in Rome during the movement against Premier Mussolin and the "situation is perfectly quiet," Henry P. Fletcher, American ambassador to Italy informed the state department today.

John Chrysler, 23, Midland Worker, Killed in Fall

John Chrysler, 23, son of Dr. J. W. Chrysler, Midland physician, was found dead in a coal bin at the Pittsburgh Crucible Steel company's plant, Midland, at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

The young man was employed at the boiler house at the mill and was last seen at 5 o'clock this morning. His death is believed to have been due to a fall from a scaffold.

He was unmarried.

NEITHER SINKS

Destroyers Stand by as Ships Try to Reach Port.

BOSTON, Jan. 17—The Munson collier Munalbro and the Norton-Lilly steamship Robin Adair crashed in a head-on collision below Cape Cod early today. Both vessels were badly damaged.

The Munalbro's stern and bow were demolished and one of her anchors lost. She is attempting to reach the cape with the Acushnen at her side.

A 40-foot hole was torn in the Robin Adair's No. 2 hold forward. After temporary repairs and precautions she was attempting to reach Vineyard Haven under her own power.

The Munalbro was bound to Portland, Maine, from Cape Henry, Va., with a cargo of coal. The collision occurred five miles southwest of the Handkerchief Shoals light ship.

The Robin Adair was in ballast from Boston for Baltimore.

Slippery Walks

Every twig on the Elm tree
Is ridged deep with ice.
The condition of the sidewalk
Is anything but nice.

You hasten for your trolley,
Your heels fly up so quick,
You come down hard and sudden,
Where the ice is smooth and thick.

The streets are all a glitter,
And a little wet on top,
You wouldn't mind the trouble,
If it wasn't for the slop.

The hill is long and slippery,
It never seems to thaw,
Next time you get a dishpan
and slide down to that car!

AMATEUR GANG CHISELS DOOR OF ENTERPRISE COAL CO. SAFE

Walnut Street Office is Looted Early Today.

FIND NO MONEY

Rifle Near Strongbox is Taken by Robbers.

Amateur yeggs entered the office of the Enterprise Coal Company, Walnut street at an early hour this morning, battered open the safe, found it empty and made their escape with a 22-25 caliber rifle, which they found in the office.

The robbery was discovered by members of the firm, at 6 o'clock. Police were notifed and the robbery was investigated by Chief McDermott.

The safe looters, believed to be youths, forced their way into the office by jimmying a window, which faces the wagon scales on the north side of the building. Fearing that the place might be robbed members of the firm have made it a practice not to lock the outer door of the safe, but turned the lock on the inside door.

Hoped to Find Payroll.

With a chisel or some sharp pointed instrument and a hammer, the yeggs forced open the lock on the inside door, but found the safe empty so far as cash was concerned. Valuable papers were not molested.

The rifle, which the thieves took with them, was kept in the office to be used in case of an attempted holdup.

Chief McDermott believes the gang responsible for the coal office robbery plundered the safe of the Enterprise Laundry, and the Metsch Refractories company, at Newell, a few weeks ago, as each job bears the same earmarks. It is though that the robbers had planned the job Friday night, believing the week's payroll to be made up and ready for distribution on Saturday.

39 Ceramists Make Inspection Trip to District Plants

Thirty-nine members of the Pittsburgh division of the American Ceramic society journeyed to East Liverpool, Friday, where they inspected the No. 6 plant of the Homer Laughlin China company, at Newell, the No. 1 plant of the Hall China company, and the Lisbon plant of the R. Thomas & Sons.

The visitors, headed by J. W. Cruikshank, president of the Pittsburgh branch, arrived here on the 9:37 a. m. train and immediately were taken to Newell for a tour through the new Laughlin pottery. Much time was devoted to a study of the tunnel kilns being operated there. Returning to East Liverpool at noon, they were entertained at luncheon at the Elks' club. Prof. C. B. Harrop, Columbus, designer of the famous Harrop tunnel kiln, made a short address following the luncheon.

The party was divided for their afternoon trip, some of them going to Lisbon for an inspection of the R. Thomas & Sons' electric porcelain plant, the others to the Hall China company's plant here. The contingent, who went on the Lisbon excursion, returned to Pittsburgh last night via Salem, while the others left East Liverpool on the 4:54 train.

FATAL STUPIDITY

Tragedy today marked the inter-city prohibition enforcement officers' war.

The magistrate who issued the warrant authorizing the search of the private home where there was not an iota of suspicion relative to any infraction of the law, and the police, who made the visit, are responsible for the death of a highly respected citizen.

Worry over what he considered a reflection upon his stainless reputation so affected the mind of the innocent victim of the raiders' war that he was driven to the impulse of taking his own life. But his fellow citizens, who knew his actions were always above reproach, branded his arrest as another striking illustration of the extremes to which narrow-gauge minds will go.

It is a gruesome climax to a week of nonsensical conduct on the part of those responsible for the East Liverpool-Wellsville situation—a situation that has accomplished nothing toward the enforcement of the prohibition law, for few known bootleggers have been caught in the dragnets of the raiders.

The tragedy should drive home to the mayors, justices of peace and other court officials of East Liverpool, Wellsville and other communities their responsibilities in issuing search warrants. PERCY FROST KILLS HIMSELF

INTER-CITY DRY SQUAD WAR ENDS IN TRAGEDY AS MAN TAKES POISON

STORM OF INDIGNATION AGAINST TACTICS OF OUTSIDERS SWEEPS CITY

Grewsome Climax Marks Week of Raids in Which Steubenville Detectives, Working for 10 Per Cent of Fines Assessed in Liquor Law Cases, Played Conspicuous Roles.

As a result of worry over his arrest by Wellsville police on a charge of illegally possessing liquor in the inter-city prohibition officers' war, Percy Thomas Frost, 64, local representative for the Hanovia Chemical company, Newark, N. J., color importers, committed suicide by drinking a quantity of chloroform at his home, 163 Pennsylvania avenue, at 2 o'clock this morning.

Physicians attribute his death to paralysis of the heart, caused by the poison.

Since his arrest last Wednesday afternoon, when a Wellsville squad, under orders of Chief of Police John Fultz, seized six bottles of home brew at his home, Frost has appeared to be in a dejected frame of mind. He was taken before Mayor James Barnes of Wellsville, following his arrest, and fined $1,000 and costs, which Wellsville police claim he made arrangements to pay.

When Frost retired last night, members of his family say he appeared to be greatly concerned because of the notoriety connected with his arrest. About 1:30 o'clock this morning, his wife, who has been ill for the last several weeks and was occupying an adjoining room, hear moans from her husband's chamber and arose to investigate. She found her husband unconscious in bed.

Mrs. Frost's efforts to arouse him failed. She succeeded in dragging him from the bed to the floor, and then ran from the house and screamed for neighbors, who reached the home within a few minutes.

Leaves Two Notes.

Dr. M. D. McCutcheon was summoned and shortly after him Dr. Albert Michaels arrived. Stomach pumps were used in an effort to remove the poison, but without result. Mr. Frost died within a few minutes after the arrival of the physicians.

On the dresser in Mr. Frost's room was an ounce bottle, labeled "Chloroform," with its contents about half gone. The belief is expressed that the victim of the tragedy took the poison before he retired. Physicians say that the chloroform taken from the bottle was not sufficent to have caused death, but that the poison effected his weakened heart.

Two notes was found in the bed chamber. One was addressed to his wife and the other to his son, Dr.

Dry Chief Turns "Thumbs Down" on Invading Raiders

CINCINNATI, Jan. 17—Following a conference between state prohibition commissioner B. F. McDonald of Columbus and police chief William Copelan of this city it was announced late Friday that Cincinnati police, instead of deputies from village liquor courts, will make 'dry' arrests in Hamilton county'. The state will receive half of the fines imposed by the local municipal court. This is the plan that is being tried out in other Ohio counties.

HOOSIER WHO MADE MILLIONS AT 37 VICTIM OF PNEUMONIA

ONCE RAILROADER

Student of Economics and Spectacular in Wall Street Deals.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17. — Daniel G. Reid, the "tin plate king", died today of pneumonia. He was 66 years old.

Reid had been virtually an invalid for the past four years. He became ill, and Monday his ailment was diagnosed as pneumonia.

At midnight he began sinking rapidly.

Reid's career was one of the most remarkable in the realm of finance. At 25, he was a division superintendent on the Pennsylvania railorad. At 37 he had acquired a fortune of $30,000,000.

Worked for Pennsylvania.

Reid was born in Mu[illegible], Ind., in 1858. When, as a young man he was working for the Pennsylvania, he was an enthusiastic student of economics and business.

When the McKinley tariff became a law, the young "railroader" saw a splendid opportunity to make money. With William B. Leeds and William H. and James H. Moore, he organized the American Tin Plate company.

This stroke of business genius brought him the $30,000,000 at the time he was 37.

Interest in Tobacco Products

After Reid acquired his immense fortune in the tin-plate business, the United States Steel Corporation took it over. The organizers, with John W. Gates, who was also interested, received $120,000,000 in stock in the steel corporation.

Other big business in the organizing of which Reid had a prominent part, were the American Can Company and Tobacco Products company.

He created a sensation in the financial world by getting control of the Rock Island Railroad at the time Gates got hold of the Louisville and Nashville.

ROME QUIET AS MUSSOLINI WINS

ROME, Jan. 17.—Despite the expected vote of confidence, 303 to 33, accorded to Premier Mussolini last night when the opposition presented its resolution attacking his election program, the attacks on former Premiers Giolitti and Orlando, opposing leaders, had had the effect today of solidifying the elements lined up against the fascist premier.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Public order has not been disturbed in Rome during the movement against Premier Mussolin and the "situation is perfectly quiet," Henry P. Fletcher, American ambassador to Italy informed the state department today.

The Munalbro was bound to Portland, Maine, from Cape Henry, Va., with a cargo of coal. The collision occurred five miles southwest of the Handkerchief Shoals light ship.

The Robin Adair was in ballast from Boston for Baltimore.

Slippery Walks

Every twig on the Elm tree
Is ridged deep with ice.
The condition of the sidewalk
Is anything but nice.

You hasten for your trolley,
Your heels fly up so quick,
You come down hard and sudden,
Where the ice is smooth and thick.

The streets are all a glitter,
And a little wet on top,
You wouldn't mind the trouble,
If it wasn't for the slop.

The hill is long and slippery,
It never seems to thaw,
Next time you get a dishpan
and slide down to that car!

AMATEUR GANG CHISELS DOOR OF ENTERPRISE COAL CO. SAFE

Walnut Street Office is Looted Early Today.

FIND NO MONEY

Rifle Near Strongbox is Taken by Robbers.

Amateur yeggs entered the office of the Enterprise Coal Company, Walnut street at an early hour this morning, battered open the safe, found it empty and made their escape with a 22-25 caliber rifle, which they found in the office.

The robbery was discovered by members of the firm, at 6 o'clock. Police were notifed and the robbery was investigated by Chief McDermott.

The safe looters, believed to be youths, forced their way into the office by jimmying a window, which faces the wagon scales on the north-side of the building. Fearing that the place might be robbed members of the firm have made it a practice not to lock the outer door of the safe, but turned the lock on the inside door.

Hoped to Find Payroll.

With a chisel or some sharp pointed instrument and a hammer, the yeggs forced open the lock on the inside door, but found the safe empty so far as cash was concerned. Valuable papers were not molested.

The rifle, which the thieves took with them, was kept in the office to be used in case of an attempted hold-up.

Chief McDermott believes the gang responsible for the coal office robbery plundered the safe of the Enterprise Laundry, and the Metsch Refractories company, at Newell, a few weeks ago, as each job bears the same earmarks. It is though that the robbers had planned the job Friday night, believing the week's payroll to be made up and ready for distribution on Saturday.

39 Ceramists Make Inspection Trip to District Plants

The visitors, headed by J. W. Cruikshank, president of the Pittsburgh branch, arrived here on the 9:37 a. m. train and immediately were taken to Newell for a tour through the new Laughlin pottery. Much time was devoted to a study of the tunnel kilns being operated there. Returning to East Liverpool at noon, they were entertained at luncheon at the Elks' club. Prof. C. B. Harrop, Columbus, designer of the famous Harrop tunnel kiln, made a short address following the luncheon.

The party was divided for their afternoon trip, some of them going to Lisbon for an inspection of the R. Thomas & Sons' electric porcelain plant, the others to the Hall China company's plant here. The contingent, who went on the Lisbon excursion, returned to Pittsburgh last night via Salem, while the others left East Liverpool on the 4:54 train.

FATAL STUPIDITY

Tragedy today marked the inter-city prohibition enforcement officers' war.

The magistrate who issued the warrant authorizing the search of the private home where there was not an iota of suspicion relative to any infraction of the law, and the police, who made the visit, are responsible for the death of a highly respected citizen.

And other contributing factors are the so-called private detectives whose incentive is a percentage of fines assessed, and the snooping, gossiping individual who essays the role, directly or indirectly, of a "stool pigeon."

Worry over what he considered a reflection upon his stainless reputation so affected the mind of the innocent victim of the raiders' war that he was driven to the impulse of taking his own life. But his fellow citizens, who knew his actions were always above reproach, branded his arrest as another striking illustration of the extremes to which narrow-gauge minds will go.

It is a gruesome climax to a week of nonsensical conduct on the part of those responsible for the East Liverpool-Wellsville situation—a situation that has accomplished nothing toward the enforcement of the prohibition law, for few known bootleggers have been caught in the dragnets of the raiders.

The tragedy should drive home to the mayors, justices of peace and other court officials of East Liverpool, Wellsville and other communities their responsibilities in issuing search warrants. The law demands that a magistrate know whereof he acts in authorizing invasion of a man's castle. And unless he is convinced by investigation that the suspect is a law violator there is absolutely no excuse for empowering patrolmen or private detectives to search a residence. The court official who issued the search warrant in the East Liverpool raid stands convicted of stupidity.

But the real root of the evil in the inter-city outrage is the enactment by municipalities of legislation to pay private detectives a percentage of fines assessed in police court cases. It should be unnecessary to employ private detectives, who are working merely for the 10 per cent of fines assessed, to assist regular patrolmen in the enforcement of the anti-liquor law. There is too much encouragement for a mercenary to sign an affidavit for a search warrant.

The inter-city raiders' hostilities have been condemned by friends as well as foes of prohibition, for reports indicate that most of the victims were citizens who made wine or so-called home brew for their own use, not for sale.

The prohibition law is a measure that works a wonderful good, but it is a law that is much abused in its enforcement. The Review-Tribune believes in law enforcement, but the authors of the prohibition law never intended that the rights of the home should be trampled into the ground.

Is it not time to cease official stupidity, ban the practice of permitting outsiders to receive a part of liquor fines and let home officials rigidly enforce the law?

REV. B. R. JOHNSON SCORES IMPORTATION OF DETECTIVES FOR LIQUOR RAIDS HERE

Condemnation of the importation of private detectives as well as the invasion of private homes in the prohibition enforcement officers' war swept East Liverpool and Wellsville today, following the death of Percy Frost.

"Dismiss all imported help" was the demand voiced as news of the tragedy reached the far corners of the district. On all sides, tribute was paid the high standing of Mr. Frost in the community, while messages of sympathy poured into the late home.

Rev. B. R. Johnson, pastor of the First Church of Christ, who was at Mr. Frost's bedside when death came, issued a signed statement in which he insists that "law must function through the established and constituted forces," and urges that "we look after our own affairs and as citizens unite to make a decent community and to create a higher respect for the law."

Mr. Frost a Good Man.

Rev. Mr. Johnson said:

"The tragic and untimely death of my friend and neighbor, Mr. Percy Frost, calls for some word of sympathy to the family and a word of explanation to the public. To say that the good citizens of our city feel keenly about the death of this good man is only half right. We feel that a wrong has been committed against a home, against a life, and against the spirit of prohibition.

"Every one in this and neighboring communities knows full well that the writer has never been and is not now in sympathy with the traffic in liquor. We all know that our laws are being violated. We have thugs, bootleggers and criminals. But Percy Frost was not in this class.

Urges Sober Thinking

He was human and as such bore the weaknesses of the race. Mr. Frost was a good man and never did he violate the laws of his country or overstep the proprieties of decency and good citizenship. We cannot understand why a man's home has to be entered and a sick wife molested by a raiding party when violent crimes in high and low places go on undisturbed.

"Feeling is high today among our

Coolidge Plans Shake-up Because Of Haynes' Methods

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—A shakeup in the federal prohibition bureau with the present director, Roy A. Haynes, being succeeded by a more vigorous type of official, was forecast here today as a part of the general re-organization of administrative officers under President Coolidge.

Whether Haynes will actually be ousted or not remains to be seen, but it did become definitely known that President Coolidge is not satisfied with enforcement methods now prevailing.

The President's dissatisfaction is said to be due to the fact that too much attention is paid to small offenders against the dry laws, "Hip Toters" and casual revellers, and not enough to ferreting out the big rings and combinations that have reduced bootlegging to the basis of an organized industry.

Mr. Patterson, with his brother-in-law, Phil Morley, and Harry Dixon, established the foundry business in 1876. About six years later the latter two withdrew from the firm, which then assumed the name of The Patterson Foundry & Machine Co.

Mr. Cawood has been associated with Mr. Patterson in the management of the business for about 25 years. He has been general manager of the company for about 20 years and assumed the presidency upon the death of the late B. C. Simms, about two years ago.

The business will continue under the name of The Patterson Foundry & Machine Co., Mr. Cawood remaining as head of the concern. The following statement, relative to the transaction was authorized by Mr. Cawood today:

Simms, who was president of the company from the time it was organized until his death."

Harry Frost, a member of the faculty of the University of Pittsburgh. While members of the family refused to discuss the contents of the two notes, one is said to have stated that he could not stand the humiliation over his arrest and the other gave instructions regarding insurance policies.

Widow is Ill.

Mr. Frost, members of his family declare, has been troubled with heart disease for several months. During the last few days he is said to have been in a verge of nervous collapse because of the raid upon his home. While his friends assured him that they believed him innocent of the charge, he is said to have imagined that the finger of scorn was being pointed at him.

Mrs. Frost today was under the care of a physician, being almost prostrated over her husband's death. In summoning the neighbors during the early morning hours, she suffered exposure which it is feared, may result in pneumonia.

Mr. Frost was born at Longton, Stoke-on-Trent, England, November 5, 1860, being a son of Thomas and Elizabeth Frost. When a young man he took up the trade of decorating in English potteries, following the trade at plants in Torquay, Birmingham and Edinburgh. Afterwards he too kcharge of the R. H. Plant china took charge of the R. H. Plant china until 1880, when he came to the United States.

Expert Pottery Decorator.

Upon his arrival here Mr. Frost became associated with Swan and Whitehead, china decorators, of Trenton, N. J. Later he was identified with W. Charles Hendrickson, also of Trenton, and then accepted an offer made from the Mt. Washington Art Company, of New Bedford, Mass., manufacturers of glass ware. After a year with the Massachusetts concern, he returned to the employment of Mr. Hendrickson, but in 1886 came to East Liverpool where he accepted a position with the Homer Laughlin China company, which then operated a small plant in East End.

Mr. Frost was employed for nine years at the Laughlin pottery, where he was foreman of the decorating department. In 1895 he took charge of one of the potteries at Sebring where he remained for several years. Returning to East Liverpool in 1903, he became art director for the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles pottery, which place he held until about 14 years ago, when he was appointed local agent for the Hanovia Chemical company, of Newark, N. J.

Member of Episcopal Church.

The deceased was united in marriage to Miss Lillian May Mackintosh, of Pittsburgh, who survives him together with one son Harry, a graduate dentist.

Mr. Frost has been a member of St. Stephen's Episcopal church for many years and was a member of the choir. He was also a member of the East Liverpool Male Chorus.

Coroner Dr. J. M. VanFossan, East Palestine, has been notified of Mr. Frost's death and is expected to arrive here late this afternoon or tonight to conduct an inquest.

Soviet Permits Sale of Vodka.

RIGA, Jan. 17.—More crops and less wasted time is the hope of the Soviet in its decision to sell Vodka, according to reports from Moscow received here today. The peasants were experementing with disastrous home stills, it was said.

Sunday Is "Friendship Day" In Church of Christ Revival

Efforts Will be Made to Have 1,000 Persons Hear Evangelist Lockhart Preach Sunday Morning.

"Friendship Day" will be observed Sunday in connection with the Lockhart-Harbinson revival campaign at the First Church of Christ. An effort is being made to have 1,000 persons attend the morning service.

Evangelist Lockhart will preach on the subject "Friendship". The afternoon meeting, at 3 o'clock, will be for women and girls only, at which he will discuss "Sweatheart, Wife and Mother." "Excuses" is the subject for his evening discourse. At the Saturday evening service, the pastor will use the topic "Pitching Toward Sodom"

A delegation of 100 church people from Wellsville attended last night's service in a body, coming here in special street cars. The Spring orchestra, which the Wellsville party brought with them, gave a 15-minute concert. A vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. J. P. Ebert.

The evangelist pleaded for church unity in his Friday evening discourse. He said:

"Whether the plea of the church of Christ is to be finally accepted as they hold forth a program for union upon which they believe the whole Christian world can unite, remains yet to be seen, but at least you are to be congratulated on consistently and continuously for a hundred years urging this program upon the divided protestant world.

"That you have the common name which will eventually prevail in the united church no one can doubt; that the great cardinal truth you demand of all who come into the church of Christ, 'that I believe with all my heart that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the Living God,' will eventually be the short and simplified creed of the whole church is just as evident; that the baptism you practice and urge as the new testiment baptism is likewise a baptism that all protestant people accept without question is also simply stating a well recognized truth; that your earnest insistence that all who come into the church of Christ shall come penitently and with a real spiritual regeneration in the new birth also makes your presentation of the gospel in accord with the best thought and highest purpose of the greatest leaders in the protestant bodies of America.

"You have urged that in the program for union that union can only come by all Christian people uniting on great cardinal principles that all readily accept and that human opinions and mere methods of organization and work be not made the test of fellowship seems to appeal to the common senses of those leaders who are studying seriously this program of ultimate union."

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Stock prices continued today the rally which was impending at the close of Friday's session. The early trading was in comparatively small volume, with interest centered chiefly in the oils, motors and specialty stocks. Sales were mostly in 100 share lots with few large blocks of stocks coming out.

Three days of reactionary movements had apparently strengthened the position of the market and there was no pressure either of liquidation or shortselling. The usual bullish week-end business statements were issued by the mercantile agencies representing an increasing volume of business being handled in all lines, with a gradual decline of stocks of goods on dealers's shelves. Another strong opening featured the grain markets while cotton was steady and foreign exchange irregular.

Nash Motors spectacular rise to 285, a new gain of 19 points for the day and a rise of 75 points from last Saturday's close was the feature of the early trading. Allis Chalmers rose 2 points and General Electric and other of the active industrials sold from 1 to 3 points above Friday's close. Considerable interest was displayed in the shipping stocks, which appeared to have started another rally under the lead of American International and Atlantic Gulf. General Motors, Mack trucks and other of the motor and accessory stocks were active at slightly higher prices. Equipment stocks were also in good demand.

The oil stocks retained the prominent position into which they moved after the turn of the year. Reports from the various producing fields were favorably. There are reports that Wortham, thought at first to be a menace to the stabilizing of the oil market, woul dsoon reach its peak, afte rwhich production would be much smaller than at present.

Good buying returned to Shell Union, Simms, Cosden, Marland Independent Oil, Texas company and the Pan-Americans. Houston gained five points on reports that back dividends would be paid on February 1.

Standard dividend rails and industrials reflected the heavy demand for stocks of this class from investors. It was estimated in authoritative sources this week that from 100,000 to 150,000 shares of stocks were being withdrawn from the market daily for the account of permanent investors which reduced the floating supply by that amount. U. S. Steel ran up to 124⅛ and New York Central, a prominent investment railroad stock, sold fractionally higher.

LAWYER FIGHTS FOR MATRICIDE

Public Defender Aids Self-styled "Jazz Baby."

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—The battle to save Dorothy Ellingson, self-styled "Jazz Baby" and only 16-year-old matricide of record, was on today.

Public Defender Frank Egan made his first appearance in her behalf at the coroner's inquest into the death of Mrs. Annie Ellingson, the slain mother, which was scheduled to get under way today.

Simultaneously he announced that he would demand when the girl's case comes up in women's court next Thursday that it be transferred to juvenile court.

It was revealed today that Egan had already clashed with the authorities over the case. He claimed that he had been denied permission to see the girl "while the police cinched their case," despite the fact that she had no counsel or funds and had expressed a preference for his conducting her defense.

A flood of requests from psychologists and alienists all over the state to be permitted to see and study the girl were denied.

It was possible that an agreement would be reached to permit the state and defense to appoint two each to see the girl in company with the city physician.

Prepares to Face Father.

Dorothy, refreshed by her second night of good sleep in jail—now keeping regular hours and staying in at night at the restraint of the law—prepared today for the ordeal of facing her accusing father and brother for a second time.

They were expected to be present at the coroner's inquest. Earl Ellingson, son of the slain woman, and brother of Dorothy, who has expressed the bitter wish that she could hang, was to appear as a witness in the first proceedings against her. He was to tell the story of finding the mother cold in death in their little cottage home. It was possible that the father would be called to establish facts concerning the identity of the slain woman.

Although she was to be present as a constitutional right, Dorothy was not to be asked to testify.

Egan said he would not permit her to do so even had authorities planned to seek her story at this first probe into her mother's death.

Asks Juvenile Court Trial.

"Miss Ellingson's case properly belongs to juvenile court," he said today. "It is her legal right and we will demand it."

He admitted that it would be possible for the juvenile court presiding judge to remand the case to superior court for trial on a capital charge. The most severe sentence that could be meted out in juvenile court would be seven years in a correctional institution, or until she is 23. The extreme penalty in superior court would be life imprisonment.

Mrs. Theresa Meikle, woman prosecutor, who has been assigned to the case by District Attorney Brady, was to make her first appearance in the case today.

Inquire Into "Jazzland" Parties.

Meanwhile police continued their inquiry into the "Jazzland" parties to which the girl attributed her downfall. More arrests of "shieks" were expected today. Police obtained considerable information from May Fitzgerald, Dorothy's companion on many "parties."

She told of gay carousals at the beach and other places. She declared that Dorothy had tried the effects of narcotics for a thrill.

"Dorothy would do anything to get a thrill or attract men," she said.

The fact that her mother was buried late yesterday seemed to have no effect on Dorothy.

"I'm glad they didn't let me go to the funeral," she said. "I prefer to remember mother as she was and then father and brother probably would have made a scene if I had gone."

1,000 Auto Owners Get 1925 Licenses; 4,000 Must Act

Approximately 1,000 of the 5,000 automobile owners in East Liverpool have taken out their 1925 automobile license tags, it was stated today.

The time limit for the 1924 license plates expires at midnight next Tuesday and positively no further time extensions will be authorized, Secretary of State Thad Brown has advised deputy registrars. Enforcement officers have been asked to arrest motorists who fail to display the new series plates after Tuesday.

About 800 of the 1,000 tags issued here this far are for pleasure cars, the other 200 being truck licenses.

An especially prepared license tag is available for motor vehicles with interchangeable bodies used for commercial and pleasure purposes. The plate carries the letters, "P. C." and is issued only by the secretary of state. Application for the special license, however, may be made through the local deputy registrar.

BOYS FACE AUTO THEFT CHARGES

Ralph Wooley, 17, and Howard Johnson, 16, West End youths, are at liberty on their own recognizance, while police are searching for three other youths, who are believed responsible for the theft of several automobiles, which have been reported during the last few weeks.

Wooley and Johnson according to Chief of Police McDermott, have admitted complicity in the theft of three cars and at the same time have implicated three companions.

Since the first of the year, nine automobiles have been reported stolen here. Most of thees have been recovered. The latest theft to be reported to the police is that of an automobile belonging to Claude Nease, which was taken while parked in front of the Ceramic theatre, Thursday night. The machine had not been located up to an early hour this afternoon.

A committee, consisting of Wilson F. Smith, J. T. Croxall, Lee C. Cooper and John Keil was named to determine the possibilities of planting trees along the highway leading into the city as a means of beautifying the landscape.

Soviet Trade Envoy Predicts U. S. Will Recognize Russia

MOSCOW, Jan. 17—Recognition of Russia by the United States government this year was predicted today by Christian Ravovsky, Soviet trade envoy, speaking before the Teachers' Congress.

While such recognition would be of "great importance to Russia," Ravovsky said, "it would be negligible if conditioned upon a Dawes plan for Russia."

"Experience shows," he continued, "that the capitalists want to wrest from us concessions which would enslave the country and convert Russia into a Morocco."

He asserted that the Soviets were determined to preserve the elementals of socialism, but that foreign investments should be protected.

citizens. We need sober thinking and we must follow our intelligences rather than our impulses. To say that the enforcement of law in this and nearby communities has been puerile and jumbled, is saying the truth. Law must function through the established and constituted forces. Our own local people should be committed to the task and if they are inadequate for the task because of lack of numbers, let us see that we have an adequate force to man the situation. Let us dismiss all imported help. Let us look after our own affairs and as citizens unite as one man to make a decent community and to create a higher respect for the law.

"Our deepest sympathy goes out to the dead man. He was a good man. He had a pure heart. He was loved by all. His wife is a fine, noble and cultured woman. She must be honored and comforted in her sorrow. Human life and human well being is the chief end of government. We cannot remain silent when these things are molested or disturbed. That we must right our ways as a city and commend ourselves to the right thinking world by a more orderly conduct of our affairs is now apparent."

Mr. Cawood has been associated with Mr. Patterson in the management of the business for about 25 years. He has been general manager of the company for about 20 years and assumed the presidency upon the death of the late B. C. Simms, about two years ago.

"Messrs Patterson and Cawood were associated together in this company for over 25 years. Mr. Cawood has been general manager of the company for the past 25 years and assumed the presidency upon the death of the late B. C. Simms, who was president of the company from the time it was organized until his death."

Harry Frost, a member of the faculty of the University of Pittsburgh. While members of the family refused to discuss the contents of the two notes, one is said to have stated that he could not stand the humiliation over his arrest and the other gave instructions regarding insurance policies.

Widow is Ill.

Mr. Frost, members of his family declare, has been troubled with heart disease for several months. During the last few days he is said to have been in a verge of nervous collapse because of the raid upon his home. While his friends assured him that they believed him innocent of the charge, he is said to have imagined that the finger of scorn was being pointed at him.

Mrs. Frost today was under the care of a physician, being almost prostrated over her husband's death. In summoning the neighbors during the early morning hours, she suffered exposure which it is feared, may result in pneumonia.

Mr. Frost was born at Longton, Stoke-on-Trent, England, November 5, 1860, being a son of Thomas and Elizabeth Frost. When a young man he took up the trade of decorating in English potteries, following the trade at plants in Torquay, Birmingham and Edinburgh. Afterwards he too kcharge of the R. H. Plant china took charge of the R. H. Plant china until 1880, when he came to the United States.

Expert Pottery Decorator.

Upon his arrival here Mr. Frost became associated with Swan and Whitehead, china decorators, of Trenton, N. J. Later he was identified with W. Charles Hendrickson, also of Trenton, and then accepted an offer made from the Mt. Washington Art Company, of New Bedford, Mass., manufacturers of glass ware. After a year with the Massachusetts concern, he returned to the employment of Mr. Hendrickson, but in 1886 came to East Liverpool where he accepted a position with the Homer Laughlin China company, which then operated a small plant in East End.

Mr. Frost was employed for nine years at the Laughlin pottery, where he was foreman of the decorating department. In 1895 he took charge of one of the potteries at Sebring where he remained for several years. Returning to East Liverpool in 1903, he became art director for the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles pottery, which place he held until about 14 years ago, when he was appointed local agent for the Hanovia Chemical company, of Newark, N. J.

Member of Episcopal Church.

The deceased was united in marriage to Miss Lillian May Mackintosh, of Pittsburgh, who survives him together with one son Harry, a graduate dentist.

Mr. Frost has been a member of St. Stephen's Episcopal church for many years and was a member of the choir. He was also a member of the East Liverpool Male Chorus.

Coroner Dr. J. M. VanFossan, East Palestine, has been notified of Mr. Frost's death and is expected to arrive here late this afternoon or tonight to conduct an inquest.

Soviet Permits Sale of Vodka.

Sunday Is "Friendship Day" In Church of Christ Revival

Efforts Will be Made to Have 1,000 Persons Hear Evangelist Lockhart Preach Sunday Morning.

"Friendship Day" will be observed Sunday in connection with the Lockhart-Harbinson revival campaign at the First Church of Christ. An effort is being made to have 1,000 persons attend the morning service.

Evangelist Lockhart will preach on the subject "Friendship". The afternoon meeting, at 3 o'clock, will be for women and girls only, at which he will discuss "Sweatheart, Wife and Mother." "Excuses" is the subject for his evening discourse. At the Saturday evening service, the pastor will use the topic "Pitching Toward Sodom".

A delegation of 100 church people from Wellsville attended last night's service in a body, coming here in special street cars. The Spring orchestra, which the Wellsville party brought with them, gave a 15-minute concert. A vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. J. P. Ebert.

The evangelist pleaded for church unity in his Friday evening discourse. He said:

"Whether the plea of the church of Christ is to be finally accepted as they hold forth a program for union upon which they believe the whole Christian world can unite, remains yet to be seen, but at least you are to be congratulated on consistently and continuously for a hundred years urging this program upon the divided protestant world.

"That you have the common name which will eventually prevail in the united church no one can doubt; that the great cardinal truth you demand of all who come into the church of Christ, 'that I believe with all my heart that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the Living God,' will eventually be the short and simplified creed of the whole church is just as evident; that the baptism you practice and urge as the new testiment baptism is likewise a baptism that all protestant people accept without question is also simply stating a well recognized truth; that your earnest insistence that all who come into the church of Christ shall come penitently and with a real spiritual regeneration in the new birth also makes your presentation of the gospel in accord with the best thought and highest purpose of the greatest leaders in the protestant bodies of America.

"You have urged that in the program for union that union can only come by all Christian people uniting on great cardinal principles that all readily accept and that human opinions and mere methods of organization and work be not made the test of fellowship seems to appeal to the common senses of those leaders who are studying seriously this program of ultimate union."

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Stock prices continued today the rally which was impending at the close of Friday's session. The early trading was in comparatively small volume, with interest centered chiefly in the oils, motors and specialty stocks. Sales were mostly in 100 share lots with few large blocks of stocks coming out.

Three days of reactionary movements had apparently strengthened the position of the market and there was no pressure either of liquidation or shortselling. The usual bullish week-end business statements were issued by the mercantile agencies representing an increasing volume of business being handled in all lines, with a gradual decline of stocks of goods on dealers's shelves. Another strong opening featured the grain markets while cotton was steady and foreign exchange irregular.

Nash Motors spectacular rise to 285, a new gain of 19 points for the day and a rise of 75 points from last Saturday's close was the feature of the early trading. Allis Chalmers rose 2 points and General Electric and other of the active industrials sold from 1 to 3 points above Friday's close. Considerable interest was displayed in the shipping stocks, which appeared to have started another rally under the lead of American International and Atlantic Gulf. General Motors, Mack trucks and other of the motor and accessory stocks were active at slightly higher prices. Equipment stocks were also in good demand.

The oil stocks retained the prominent position into which they moved after the turn of the year. Reports from the various producing fields were favorably. There are reports that Wortham, thought at first to be a menace to the stabilizing of the oil market, woul dsoon reach its peak, afte rwhich production would be much smaller than at present.

Good buying returned to Shell Union, Simms, Cosden, Marland Independent Oil, Texas company and the Pan-Americans. Houston gained five points on reports that back dividends would be paid on February 1.

Standard dividend rails and industrials reflected the heavy demand for stocks of this class from investors. It was estimated in authoritative sources this week that from 100,000 to 150,000 shares of stocks were being withdrawn from the market daily for the account of permanent investors which reduced the floating supply by that amount. U. S. Steel ran up to 124¾ and New York Central, a prominent investment railroad stock, sold fractionally higher.

LAWYER FIGHTS FOR MATRICIDE

Public Defender Aids Self-styled "Jazz Baby."

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—The battle to save Dorothy Ellingson, self-styled "Jazz Baby" and only 16-year-old matricide of record, was on today.

Public Defender Frank Egan made his first appearance in her behalf at the coroner's inquest into the death of Mrs. Annie Ellingson, the slain mother, which was scheduled to get under way today.

Simultaneously he announced that he would demand when the girl's case comes up in women's court next Thursday that it be transferred to juvenile court.

It was revealed today that Egan had already clashed with the authorities over the case. He claimed that he had been denied permission to see the girl "while the police cinched their case," despite the fact that she had no counsel or funds and had expressed a preference for his conducting her defense.

A flood of requests from psychologists and alienists all over the state to be permitted to see and study the girl were denied.

It was possible that an agreement would be reached to permit the state and defense to appoint two each to see the girl in company with the city physician.

Prepares to Face Father.

Dorothy, refreshed by her second night of good sleep in jail—now keeping regular hours and staying in at night at the restraint of the law—prepared today for the ordeal of facing her accusing father and brother for a second time.

They were expected to be present at the coroner's inquest. Earl Ellingson, son of the slain woman, and brother of Dorothy, who has expressed the bitter wish that she could hang, was to appear as a witness in the first proceedings against her. He was to tell the story of finding the mother cold in death in their little cottage home. It was possible that the father would be called to establish facts concerning the identity of the slain woman.

Although she was to be present as a constitutional right, Dorothy was not to be asked to testify.

Egan said he would not permit her to do so even had authorities planned to seek her story at this first probe into her mother's death.

Asks Juvenile Court Trial.

"Miss Ellingson's case properly belongs to juvenile court," he said today. "It is her legal right and we will demand it."

He admitted that it would be possible for the juvenile court presiding judge to remand the case to superior court for trial on a capital charge. The most severe sentence that could be meted out in juvenile court would be seven years in a correctional institution, or until she is 23. The extreme penalty in superior court would be life imprisonment.

Mrs. Theresa Meikle, woman prosecutor, who has been assigned to the case by District Attorney Brady, was to make her first appearance in the case today.

Inquire Into "Jazzland" Parties.

Meanwhile police continued their inquiry into the "Jazzland" parties to which the girl attributed her downfall. More arrests of "shieks" were expected today. Police obtained considerable information from May Fitzgerald, Dorothy's companion on many "parties."

She told of gay carousals at the beach and other places. She declared that Dorothy had tried the effects of narcotics for a thrill.

"Dorothy would do anything to get a thrill or attract men," she said.

The fact that her mother was buried late yesterday seemed to have no effect on Dorothy.

"I'm glad they didn't let me go to the funeral,' she said. "I prefer to remember mother as she was and then father and brother probably would have made a scene if I had gone."

1,000 Auto Owners Get 1925 Licenses; 4,000 Must Act

Approximately 1,000 of the 5,000 automobile owners in East Liverpool have taken out their 1925 automobile license tags, it was stated today.

The time limit for the 1924 license plates expires at midnight next Tuesday and positively no further time extensions will be authorized, Secretary of State Thad Brown has advised deputy registrars. Enforcement officers have been asked to arrest motorists who fail to display the new series plates after Tuesday.

About 800 of the 1,000 tags issued here this far are for pleasure cars, the other 200 being truck licenses.

An especially prepared license tag is available for motor vehicles with interchangeable bodies used for commercial and pleasure purposes. The plate carries the letters, "P. C." and is issued only by the secretary of state. Application for the special license, however, may be made through the local deputy registrar.

BOYS FACE AUTO THEFT CHARGES

Ralph Wooley, 17, and Howard Johnson, 16, West End youths, are at liberty on their own recognizance, while police are searching for three other youths, who are believed responsible for the theft of several automobiles which have been reported during the last few weeks.

Wooley and Johnson according to Chief of Police McDermott, have admitted complicity in the theft of three cars and at the same time have implicated three companions.

Since the first of the year, nine automobiles have been reported stolen here. Most of thees have been recovered. The latest theft to be reported to the police is that of an automobile belonging to Claude Nease, which was taken while parked in front of the Ceramic theatre, Thursday night. The machine had not been located up to an early hour this afternoon.

ROAD FUND PLAN IS C. OF C. TOPIC

The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce met in the Chamber's rooms in the Little Building, last evening.

The proposition of raising money to be applied to the fund of maintaining the Midland-East Liverpool road during the winter months was referred to the roads and streets committee.

A committee, consisting of Wilson F. Smith, J. T. Croxall, Lee C. Cooper and John Keil was named to determine the possibilities of planting trees along the highway leading into the city as a means of beautifying the landscape.

Soviet Trade Envoy Predicts U. S. Will Recognize Russia

MOSCOW, Jan. 17—Recognition of Russia by the United States government this year was predicted today by Christian Ravovsky, Soviet trade envoy, speaking before the Teachers' Congress.

While such recognition would be of "great importance to Russia," Ravovsky said, "it would be negligible if conditioned upon a Dawes plan for Russia."

"Experience shows," he continued, "that the capitalists want to wrest from us concessions which would enslave the country and convert Russia into a Morocco."

He asserted that the Soviets were determined to preserve the elementals of socialism, but that foreign investments should be protected.

citizens. We need sober thinking and we must follow our intelligences rather than our impulses. To say that the enforcement of law in this and nearby communities has been puerile and jumbled, is saying the truth. Law must function through the established and constituted forces. Our own local people should be committed to the task and if they are inadequate for the task because of lack of numbers, let us see that we have an adequate force to man the situation. Let us dismiss all imported help. Let us look after our own affairs and as citizens unite as one man to make a decent community and to create a higher respect for the law.

"Our deepest sympathy goes out to the dead man. He was a good man. He had a pure heart. He was loved by all. His wife is a fine, noble and cultured woman. She must be honored and comforted in her sorrow. Human life and human well being is the chief end of government. We cannot remain silent when these things are molested or disturbed. That we must right our ways as a city and commend ourselves to the right thinking world by a more orderly conduct of our affairs is now apparent."

HIGHS DIVIDE WITH FREEDOM

Local Girls' Team Wins, While Boys' Five is Defeated.

Wellsville high school basketball squads broke even with Freedom scholastic passers in contests last night on the home floor. A large crowd saw the inaugaural contests of the home season.

The Wellsville girls' team defeated the visiting girls, 29 to 25, and the Orange and Black quintet lost out to the Pennsylvanians, 27 to 25.

The principal clash of the twin-bill proved a fitting contest for the opener. There was plenty of action and thrills were not lacking.

Zimmerman's five jumped into the lead at the outset, penetrating the Freedom defenses for frequent scores. At the end of the half the locals were leading by the count of 18 to 9.

The visitors came back with a rush in the second period and a desperate assault on the Wellsville baskets materially reduced the Orange and Black lead. Continuing their attack into the final quarter the Freedom five crept steadily upon the locals until, just a few seconds before the whistle blew, they tied the score at 25-25. One final toss by Forward Christian just as the whistle was sounding shot through the hoop and brought down with it the two points that gave Freedom the game.

The unerring eye of Miss Georgia Weekly was the big thing in the Wellsville girls' victory. Miss Weekly scored 12 field goals and three fouls, or all but two points of her team's 29.

"MEET THE WIFE," NEW YORK COMEDY SUCCESS, AT CERAMIC ON THURSDAY

Augusta Baylston.

Lynn Startling's delightfully witty comedy, "Meet the Wife," with Augusta Boylston as the heroine will be presented at the Ceramic Theatre, Thursday, January 22.

The gallery of character sketches presented in "Meet the Wife" are all of American types met in every day life. The dialogue is good, crisp, characteristic conversion that reveals exactly what the people of the stage think of each other and of life in general. This play captured New York audiences for one year and delighted Chicago for two months.

Augusta Bolystion's acting of Mrs. Gertrude Lennox, an up to date who takes a second husband too hastily, with her shallowness and gush absurd philosophies and stifled fears, her vivacity and her shrewd flashes of common sense is a characterization which brings many a smile and laugh long after one has left the theatre. There is tolerance for the young couple who are at that stage of their courtship when public opinion give license for their being perfectly idotic. There is merriment in the complications arising from the return of Gertrude's husband and the snappy dialogue's husband pro tem and Messenger Bellis who had made his escape from marital toils in the confusion of the San Francisco earthquake and fire—and rejoices at his freedom.

AMERICAN THEATRE

Three Days Starting Monday

"THE DARLING OF NEW YORK"
With Baby Peggy.

The baby film star enacts the role of a waif who became stranded with a bunch of crooks in the New York Ghetto through the carelessness of a nurse maid. Throughout the play the child carries with her an old rag doll. The audience is let in on the secret of the doll's importance in the play when the gem smuggler who abducts the child places a fortune in smuggled diamonds in the stuffing of the doll.

Another Event.

Peggy was assigned by an unkind foster-parent to the duty of scrubbing the kitchen floor. That in itself is quite a task for such a tiny youngster. But her method of meeting the situation should make kitchen history.

She tied a mop cloth to the tail of the dog. Then she appropriated a dried herring from an ice-box, which she tied on a string to a broom handle. Climing into a chair she began fishing—for the pup.

With the fragrance of the herring assailing its nostrils, the dog immediately forgot the mop trailing behind him. Peggy turned 'round and 'round in the chair, coaxing the dog around the chair. By maneuvring the chair around the kitchen and pouring frequent applications of suds on the floor the kitchen soon was well scrubbed.

Panama Overlooked Ending World War; Treaty Now Signed

PANAMA, Jan.—Panama has just ended her participation in the World War by the ratification of the treaty of St. Germain, establishing peace with Austria.

As a signatory to the treaty, the Government of Panama received in due course a bulky shipment of volumes, which having a dry and legal appearance, were shoved to one side in the foreign office and forgotten. On a recent change of ministers, a house cleaning disclosed the presence of the treaty,and it was forthwith handed over to the national assembly for ratification. HIGHS DIVIDE WITH FREEDOM

Local Girls' Team Wins, While Boys' Five is Defeated.

Wellsville high school basketball squads broke even with Freedom scholastic passers in contests last night on the home floor. A large crowd saw the inaugaural contests of the home season.

The Wellsville girls' team defeated the visiting girls, 29 to 25, and the Orange and Black quintet lost out to the Pennsylvanians, 27 to 25.

The principal clash of the twin-bill proved a fitting contest for the opener. There was plenty of action and thrills were not lacking.

Zimmerman's five jumped into the lead at the outset, penetrating the Freedom defenses for frequent scores. At the end of the half the locals were leading by the count of 18 to 9.

The visitors came back with a rush in the second period and a desperate assault on the Wellsville baskets materially reduced the Orange and Black lead. Continuing their attack into the final quarter the Freedom five crept steadily upon the locals until, just a few seconds before the whistle blew, they tied the score at 25-25. One final toss by Forward Christian just as the whistle was sounding shot through the hoop and brought down with it the two points that gave Freedom the game.

The unerring eye of Miss Georgia Weekly was the big thing in the Wellsville girls' victory. Miss Weekly scored 12 field goals and three fouls, or all but two points of her team's 29.

AMERICAN THEATRE

Three Days Starting Monday

"THE DARLING OF NEW YORK"

With Baby Peggy.

The baby film star enacts the role of a waif who became stranded with a bunch of crooks in the New York Ghetto through the carelessness of a nurse maid. Throughout the play the child carries with her an old rag doll. The audience is let in on the secret of the doll's importance in the play when the gem smuggler who abducts the child places a fortune in smuggled diamonds in the stuffing of the doll.

Another Event.

Peggy was assigned by an unkind foster-parent to the duty of scrubbing the kitchen floor. That in itself is quite a task for such a tiny youngster. But her method of meeting the situation should make kitchen history.

She tied a mop cloth to the tail of the dog. Then she appropriated a dried herring from an ice-box, which she tied on a string to a broom handle. Climing into a chair she began fishing—for the pup.

With the fragrance of the herring assailing its nostrils, the dog immediately forgot the mop trailing behind him. Peggy turned 'round and 'round in the chair, coaxing the dog around the chair. By maneuvring the chair around the kitchen and pouring frequent applications of suds on the floor the kitchen soon was well scrubbed.

"MEET THE WIFE," NEW YORK COMEDY SUCCESS, AT CERAMIC ON THURSDAY

Augusta Bayliston.

Lynn Startling's delightfully witty comedy, "Meet the Wife," with Augusta Boylston as the heroine will be presented at the Ceramic Theatre, Thursday, January 22.

The gallery of character sketches presented in "Meet the Wife" are all of American types met in every day life. The dialogue is good, crisp, characteristic conversion that reveals exactly what the people of the stage think of each other and of life in general. This play captured New York audiences for one year and delighted Chicago for two months.

Augusta Bolystion's acting of Mrs. Gertrude Lennox, an up to date who takes a second husband too hastily, with her shallowness and gush absurd philosophies and stifled fears, her vivacity and her shrewd flashes of common sense is a characterization which brings many a smile and laugh long after one has left the theatre. There is tolerance for the young couple who are at that stage of their courtship when public opinion give license for their being perfectly idotic. There is merriment in the complications arising from the return of Gertrude's husband and the snappy dialogue's husband pro tem and Messenger Bellis who had made his escape from martial toils in the confusion of the San Francisco earthquake and fire—and rejoices at his freedom.

EAST LIVERPOOL—AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

Slippery Sidewalks

"East Liverpool has more icy sidewalks than any city I have visited this winter."

This significant remark, made yesterday by a salesman for a jobbing house, whose territory includes Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, was an echo of the comment of hundreds of people who have risked fractured limbs by traversing not only sidewalks but sections of highways usually reserved for vehicular traffic during the last few days.

And the situation is attributable to the fact that residents, seemingly unmindful of their own safety as well as safeguards for their neighbors, neglected to remove accumulated snow. Rain, followed by freezing temperature, added the touch which made walking perilous.

In most cities, ordinances are on the statute books, providing penalties for failure to clean sidewalks within 24 or 48 hours after a snowfall. East Liverpool, it is said, has similar legislation, but it is dust-covered because of the many years it has been held in the municipal archives.

The Golden Rule should be adopted here relative to the icy sidewalks. If there were more consideration of the welfare of our neighbors, East Liverpool should have less difficulty climbing and descending its many hilly thoroughfares. Let's remember this when the next sleet storm converts the sidewalks into skating places.

Easy On Germany

The United States has evidently compromised in its claims on Germany. The amount agreed upon for the payment of war damage claims and the American army of occupation totals $600,000,000, with an allowance of $350,000,000 for the former and $250,000,000 for the latter. These in themselves are moderate charges, considerably less than might have been expected. But it is pointed out that even so, they are smaller than they appear.

Not to mention interest to date, they represent not a present principal but aggregate payments over a period of 25 years. Discounted at current rates, it is estimated that the combined damage and army maintenance payments, even if every dollar is paid according to program, have a present value of only a little over $300,000,000.

This is not said in criticism, but in illustration of the fact that Uncle Sam has been obliged to cut down his claims against Germany very much as the allies have, in order to get anything at all. We shall be lucky indeed if we are able to avoid a similar trimming of the allied debts still unfunded.

Pearls

Are pearls jewels? Most persons will say yes without a moment's hesitation. The government is not so sure. So there has arisen a controversy over the importation of a certain famous string of pearls.

It is a necklace of 43 perfect pearls of large and finely graded size, which belonged to the former Princess Anastasia of Greece, previously Mrs. Leeds, wife of the American "Tin Plate King." Naturally, a combination of pearls and royalty is hard to beat, in its appeal to a plain and democratic people.

If pearls are merely pearls, they are admissible on payment of a 20 per cent duty. If they are classified as "jewels," the duty rises to 80 per cent, which would mean several hundred thousand dollars. And rather than give all that money to the country where it was made, the family would take the pearls and sell them abroad.

Which might be just as well. Big, perfect pearls, diamonds and other gew-gaws are lovely things; but the lovelier they are, the less often they are worn and the fewer people are able to enjoy them. Also, the "overhead" on them is enormous. There are outfits of jewelry in this country which, considering interest on the investment and expense of safe-keeping, cost the owners many thousand dollars for every time they wear them.

The finest jewels, like the finest paintings and sculptures, are only worth their market value when they are open to the view of all, as such things are in museums.

Haskin Letter

MANY PEOPLE BUY STOCKS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Since the election the New York stock exchange has been the scene of what has appeared from the outside to be wild speculation. On many days more than a million shares of stock have changed hands, involving vast sums of money. There has been a real stock market boom of proportions not experienced for some years.

A study of this activity has revealed that this boom is substantially different from the usual type. Stock market booms ordinarily reflect trading among professional dealers and speculators, those who think they see opportunities either to buy low and in a few days sell at a higher figure, or to sell at a good price and buy at a lower figure before making delivery, which is known as selling short. All such trading is done on margin, which means that the purchaser does not put up the full purchase price, but only about 10 points. He really takes a sort of option on a stock, selling it again before he ever really posserses the shares.

The difference in the present boom, as revealed by a study of the trading, is that a much larger percentage of stocks has been purchased outright by investors. Orders have been placed for stock and paid for in full, the certificates being delivered to the buyer who intends to hold them indefinitely.

The federal reserve board probably was the first agency to discover this. When speculators are trading actively, they deal with borrowed money. When the stock market boom began to develop the board expected that a strong demand for credit would develop as usual and its failure to appear resulted in an analysis of the situation. The investigation showed that there was no greatly increased demand for bank credit because persons from all over the country were causing the boom by buying stocks outright for investment. This steady buying was largely responsible for putting the price of stocks higher and higher.

There was some bank borrowing, but member banks in New York had no occasion to red'scount with the federal reserve bank to obtain funds because the investors from all over the country were sending money to New York to pay for their purchases. This put so much ready money in New York banks that it was unnecessary to have recourse to the federal reserve bank.

A SIGN OF PROSPERITY

This unusual type of stock market boom is causing much comment among economists and students of American financial affairs. It is regarded as an excellent sign, revealing a healthy and prosperous condition. Examination of the records shows that there has been a tremendous increase in ownership of big enterprises by the people generally. Not so long ago a stockholder in a corporation was regarded as rather a rare being. The popular conception was that the man who owned shares and received a portion of his income from dividends belonged to the Wall Street class of rich men. Nowadays a stockholder is a familiar figure. Every street car load of passengers contains perhaps a dozen stockholders in industrial enterprises.

The fresh buying movement reflected in this winter's stock market boom indicates that when the statistics are compiled it will be seen that thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands, have been added to the numbers of those who own stocks in industrial corporations.

In 1900 there were only 4,400,000 stockholders in all companies in the United States. Each stockholder held on an average of 140 shares. By 1917 the number had doubled, being then 8,600,000 with an average of 77 shares each. The latest figures available are for 1923, when there were 14,400,000 stockholders, each holding an average of 49 shares.

This shows that the numbers of rich men holding large interests have been heavily cut down. The average holding by the individual stockholders has been cut in three, or nearly so. By the time statistics of this winter's avalanche of popular purchasing are available it doubtless will be shown that there has been a still wider distribution.

Great corporations have encouraged the purchase of stocks by their employes and by the public generally. The American Telephone and Telegraph company is reputed to have the largest number of stockholders of any company in the country. In 1900 this company had only 7,535 stockholders, but in 1923 it had 281,149.

MANY HOLD STEEL SHARES

The United States Steel corporation in 1900 had 54,018 stockholders, while in 1923 it had 179,090. It is natural for the American mind to think of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey as a closely held corporatino, the property of the Rockefeller family. That this is far from the truth is shown by the fact that stockholders increased from 3,832 in 1900 to 81,070 in 1923.

The Pennsylvania railroad in 1900 had an unusually large number of stockholders for that period —51,543. But in the intervening period it has trebled this number and now reports 155,228.

Perhaps a more striking increase is shown by the United States Rubber company. From only 3,000 stockholders in 1900 this company has increased to 34,024 in 1923—more than tenfold.

This movement has been going on for 20 years, resulting in what is called an industrial revolution. Instead of employing the Russian system of going out and taking over property by force or by "direct action" as the Bolsheviks call it, the American people are bringing about a similar result through the peaceable and legal way of purchase. An indication of how corporate income is spreading down through the masses of the people is revealed by statistics of income prepared by the internal revenue bureau. As late as 1916 the income group having income of $20,000 a year and more received 79 per cent of all the dividends paid by American corporations. Five years later this group was receiving only 46.8 per cent or less than half of the dividends paid, persons of the lower income groups receiving the remainder.

In 1922 the income group from $1,000 to $5,000 a year received 18.4 per cent of all the dividends paid, more than one-sixth of the total corporate net income of the country. The class from $5,000 to $10,000 received 13.4 per cent of all the dividends. Thus persons receiving incomes of $10,000 a year and less received a third of all the dividend income paid by American business activity.

These dividends, of course, are in addition to the wages and salaries paid these persons. By adding together dividends and wages paid it would seem that a very large proportion of the gross income of American industry is returned to the pockets of persons of moderate means, a situation unheard of in any other country save the United States.

The statistics show that the American people as a whole, and not small groups of them, actually own American business, and this winter's active buying of stocks shows that the tendency is being carried on with acceleration.

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 17.—Possibility that the thirteenth annual international sweepstakes race will not take place on the local motor speedway on Memorial Day was emphasized in a statement by members of the Indiana legislature who are sponsoring a "blue law" program.

The legislators said they were reasonably certain that Governor Edward Jackson would not veto a measure prohibiting the holding of the speedway classic on Memorial Day, if the bill is passed by the general assembly now in session. Former Governor Warren T. McCray exercised the veto power when a similar bill came up for his approval two years ago.

It is the contention of the bill's advocates that a motor speedway race is not in keeping with the spirit of Memorial Day. Their objection is one of principle, and no opposition is voiced to holding the race at a different time.

In the event that the speedway bill becomes a law, it is understood the 500-mile event, premier of all speedway races and always participated in by the world's best drivers, will be held on some proximate date.

Entry blanks for the $50,000 prize race are in the mails, and several noted pilots already have announced they will compete again this season. T. E. Myers, secretary-treasurer of the speedway association, is in Europe attempting to interest factories on the continent in entering racing teams, as is the practice among American manufacturers.

Belgium, France and Italy will be visited by Myers before he goes to England to obtain an audience with English automobile magnates, it was said. He is to return to Indianapolis early in February. No foreign car has won a race here since the late Howard Wilcox, driving a French Peugeot, emerged the victor in 1919.

The race this year will mark the first appearance of the 122 cubic inches displacement cars on the local speedway, according to a ruling of the American Automobile association. Hereafter racing engines will be limited to 91½ cubic inches. Conditions for the coming race are almost identical with those of the 1924 event.

The awards amount to $50,000 in cash, with the winner receiving $10,000 and the remainder graduating among the other drivers down to the tenth pilot to finish. He is given $1,400. The late Joe Boyer, in a Duesenberg, won the 1924 race, averaging 98.23 miles an hour.

Seventy-two murders, a new record, were committed in Indianapolis in 1924, according to Chief of Police H. F. Rikhoff. This was twice the number of homicides called to the attention of police in 1923.

Traffic law violators also set up a new record during the past year. Police records show 15,157 offenders were arrested, 3,187 of whom were charged with speeding.

Mrs. Martha Hodson, who is 93 years old and who isn't shy "like other girls" about admitting her age, has a new secret for feeling young after 40. She expressed it in the words—"keep busy."

"I've been so busy all my life I haven't realized how old I was getting to be," Mrs. Hodson confided.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 17.—A visit to New Orleans is not complete without a stop at the Old Absinthe House on Bourbon and Bienville streets. This was once the headquarters of the celebrated pirate Lafitte. The floor is coated with sawdust and there is the musty air of antiquity.

The ancient bar remains even to the marble slab that has been worn into grooves by the many glasses under the absinthe dripper. The ancient circular stairway, patched and shaky, is 175 years old. There are many private rooms where high carnival privacy has given way to the sipping of soft drinks.

A bartender of the pre-Volstead days—hair roached back and fierce mustachios—tells you of the departed glories. He tells of the hard-drinking days when night before roysterers came to the absinthe house with dawn and quaffed three or four absinthes for pickups.

No old haunt I have ever visited retains so much of the past. You somehow expect to hear the rattle of the saber or to see a swash-buckler in cape and high top boots pop out from one of the myriad turnings with a knife in his teeth.

Many duel challenges were made in the Old Absinthe House and were fought at sun up on the dueling grounds which has become a beautiful city owned park.

A sort distance from the Old Absinthe House is the old slave mart. The slave block is in the center of a Creole balconied court. Here men and women were sold "up the river" to the highest bidder.

New Orleans awakens much in the same fashion as Paris. The people greet dawn with a song. Dardies whistle along the street. There is a zip to pedestrians. You get the idea here are a happy people looking forward joyously to another day.

This afternoon we decided to let Bassett Blakely act as guide. He led us to an oyster bar and permitted us to watch him devour 16 oysters. His dismissal as guide immediately followed.

It interested me to know what effect prohibition has had on New Orleans. It has always been said that the law would strike the hardest blow at New Orleans and New York gaiety. I saw no evidence of it. The cafes are flourishing and there is a light heartedness about the city that one expects to find.

It seems to me I saw the perfect type of my visualization of an old southern gentleman today. It was in the French quarter. He was tall and as straight as an arrow. A homespun cape was close around his shoulders. In his right hand he carried a gold-knobbed stick. He wore a wide brimmed hat at a jaunty angle and a huge cameo pin decorated the front of his starched white shirt. His silver hair and goatee gave him an unusual dignity. You felt instinctively that here was a man who was a capable judge of horseflesh and whisky.

And I especially like the way the men greet the ladies with a wide sweeping flourish of the hat and a deep bow. New Orleans sets her ladies on a high pinnacle. And deservedly so, for they are strikingly beautiful to behold.

One of Napoleon's sayings, most characteristic of him, was "J'ordonne, ou je me tais." That means, "I give orders, or I say nothing." That described Calvin Coolidge. He proved, as vice president, and during the campaign, that he knew how to say nothing, when not talking seemed wise.

Now, politicians discover that he also knows how to give orders. And, it doesn't please all of them.

BROADCASTING RELIGION

The Paulist fathers of New York will install a powerful radio station, to cost $40,000, to be used "to teach the truth about the Catholic church to the people of the United States."

That means obeying, on a gigantic scale, the command to preach the Gospel to all the world.

The Paulist fathers undoubtedly will have competition, for the air is high and wide, and the ether through which the radio message travels reaches to the farthest fixed star. Each individual can "tune in" to get the message that he wants.

Unfortunately, there will probably be more tuning in for jazz music than for religious exhortation.

AN ECLIPSE COMING

Foreign scientists are coming in rapidly from all directions to study the sun's eclipse. They will use it to help verify or disprove part of the Einstein theory.

And not one of them will be frightened. Nobody except few savages here and there will believe, as everybody once believed, that an evil spirit is trying to eat up the sun. Nobody will kneel down and pray that the sun may come back to save the world from total darkness and that the devouring demon be compelled to drop it.

Superstition was not confined to the "lower classes" in the good old days, and it is not confined to them now.

That good, learned man, a true American patriot of the seventeenth century, Increase Mather, who wrote the "Essay on Remarkable Providences," observed an eclipse of the sun, and believed it was intended to express the grief of nature at the death of President Chauncey, of Harvard college. He was mistaken. The sun and nature didn't even know that Chauncey was dead.

HOW RICH IS AMERICA?

How much do you think the United States is worth, all together, in thousands of millions of dollars?

According to the census bureau, all the property in the United States three years ago amounted to about $320,863,862,000. That means 320 times one thousand million dollars, with 803 millions to spare.

It's a great deal of money, but you may be sure that its much less than the United States is worth. Properly developed the state of Texas will be worth more than the total "wealth of the United States" as now estimated.

Nobody has the faintest idea what the real wealth of this country amounts to. In 10 years the total wealth, according to the figures above, has increased more than 72 per cent. Give this nation fifty million more inhabitants, intelligent, willing to work, and they would raise the value of the nation's property 500 per cent in half a generation.

The value of the nitrogen in the air, which men will eventually extract cheaply, could buy a dozen Rockefellers, if you could only get the wealth floating around in the air above some small state. We're very rich. Unfortunately we are not safe from attack.

President Coolidge, it is said, indorses a bill that would spend one hundred and fifty million dollars in six years, $25,000,000 a year for new federal buildings. The president's indorsement is wise. During the war there was no building, and building needs should be improved.

But this thought is recommended to the president and to his advisers. Don't overlook the fact that $200,000 worth of flying machines from a foreign country could destroy every one of the $150,000,000 worth of buildings in short order.

It would be worth while to spend a few million dollars to get the needed fighting airplanes and swift pursuit planes, if only as insurance for the billions of dollars' worth of property, open to attack in this city.

Germany and France already have their tariff troubles. Under the Dawes arrangement, Germany may now set up tariff walls against France, although she may not have an army or flying machines.

England is agitated, because the balance of trade is against her, and, as a nation not able to live on her own products, she must sell goods abroad or sink into poverty.

This country feels cheerful about business. Our trade balance for the past 12 months was more than nine hundred million dollars. The exact figures show that we sold to other nations more than we bought from them by a margin of $997,285,000. That may be good for us, although there are two views on that question. It is bad for Europe. She must get money from us to pay her debts to us. She can't manufacture the gold.

What will happen when, in the course of the Dawes plan, it becomes necessary for Germany to pay really big indemnities every year? This is an answer to that question, by one of the most important and able financiers in the country.

"Germany will say to France and England, when the indemnities become heavy, 'if you insist on payment, very well. I must cut prices to the bone and undersell you, as I CAN do in the principal markets of the world, thus throwing your workers out of employment, and your industries into disorder.'

"France, not much of an export nation, will tell Germany to pay in full, and do as she pleases in the world markets.

"England, on the contrary, bound to sell all over the world or stave, and with a threatening radical labor party to worry her, will demand that Germany compete on a reasonable basis, even though it might mean smaller reparations.

"Then, France and England, on opposite sides of the fence, will have to fight it out. Germany will say, truthfully, that she cannot get cash for unprecedentedly huge reparation payments, without taking world markets from other countries."

That is probably as good a description of what will happen as any. But nobody knows what the situation will really be, at any time. It is all temporizing guessing.

EAST LIVERPOOL—AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

Slippery Sidewalks

"East Liverpool has more icy sidewalks than any city I have visited this winter."

This significant remark, made yesterday by a salesman for a jobbing house, whose territory includes Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, was an echo of the comment of hundreds of people who have risked fractured limbs by traversing not only sidewalks but sections of highways usually reserved for vehicular traffic during the last few days.

And the situation is attributable to the fact that residents, seemingly unmindful of their own safety as well as safeguards for their neighbors, neglected to remove accumulated snow. Rain, followed by freezing temperature, added the touch which made walking perilous.

In most cities, ordinances are on the statute books, providing penalties for failure to clean sidewalks within 24 or 48 hours after a snowfall. East Liverpool, it is said, has similar legislation, but it is dust-covered because of the many years it has been held in the municipal archives.

The Golden Rule should be adopted here relative to the icy sidewalks. If there were more consideration of the welfare of our neighbors, East Liverpool should have less difficulty climbing and descending its many hilly thoroughfares. Let's remember this when the next sleet storm converts the sidewalks into skating places.

Easy On Germany

The United States has evidently compromised in its claims on Germany. The amount agreed upon for the payment of war damage claims and the American army of occupation totals $600,000,000, with an allowance of $350,000,000 for the former and $250,000,000 for the latter. These in themselves are moderate charges, considerably less than might have been expected. But it is pointed out that even so, they are smaller than they appear.

Not to mention interest to date, they represent not a present principal but aggregate payments over a period of 25 years. Discounted at current rates, it is estimated that the combined damage and army maintenance payments, even if every dollar is paid according to program, have a present value of only a little over $300,000,000.

This is not said in criticism, but in illustration of the fact that Uncle Sam has been obliged to cut down his claims against Germany very much as the allies have, in order to get anything at all. We shall be lucky indeed if we are able to avoid a similar trimming of the allied debts still unfunded.

Pearls

Are pearls jewels? Most persons will say yes without a moment's hesitation. The government is not so sure. So there has arisen a controversy over the importation of a certain famous string of pearls.

It is a necklace of 43 perfect pearls of large and finely graded size, which belonged to the former Princess Anastasia of Greece, previously Mrs. Leeds, wife of the American "Tin Plate King." Naturally, a combination of pearls and royalty is hard to beat, in its appeal to a plain and democratic people.

If pearls are merely pearls, they are admissible on payment of a 20 per cent duty. If they are classified as "jewels," the duty rises to 80 per cent, which would mean several hundred thousand dollars. And rather than give all that money to the country where it was made, the family would take the pearls and sell them abroad.

Which might be just as well. Big, perfect pearls, diamonds and other gew-gaws are lovely things; but the lovelier they are, the less often they are worn and the fewer people are able to enjoy them. Also, the "overhead" on them is enormous. There are outfits of jewelry in this country which, considering interest on the investment and expense of safe-keeping, cost the owners many thousand dollars for every time they wear them.

The finest jewels, like the finest paintings and sculptures, are only worth their market value when they are open to the view of all, as such things are in museums.

MANY PEOPLE BUY STOCKS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Since the election the New York stock exchange has been the scene of what has appeared from the outside to be wild speculation. On many days more than a million shares of stock have changed hands, involving vast sums of money. There has been a real stock market boom of proportions not experienced for some years.

A study of this activity has revealed that this boom is substantially different from the usual type. Stock market booms ordinarily reflect trading among professional dealers and speculators, those who think they see opportunities either to buy low and in a few days sell at a higher figure, or to sell at a good price and buy at a lower figure before making delivery, which is known as selling short. All such trading is done on margin, which means that the purchaser does not put up the full purchase price, but only about 10 points. He really takes a sort of option on a stock, selling it again before he ever really possesses the shares.

The difference in the present boom, as revealed by a study of the trading, is that a much larger percentage of stocks has been purchased outright by investors. Orders have been placed for stock and paid for in full, the certificates being delivered to the buyer who intends to hold them indefinitely.

The federal reserve board probably was the first agency to discover this. When speculators are trading actively, they deal with borrowed money. When the stock market boom began to develop the board expected that a strong demand for credit would develop as usual and its failure to appear resulted in an analysis of the situation. The investigation showed that there was no greatly increased demand for bank credit because persons from all over the country were causing the boom by buying stocks outright for investment. This steady buying was largely responsible for putting the price of stocks higher and higher.

There was some bank borrowing, but member banks in New York had no occasion to red'scount with the federal reserve bank to obtain funds because the investors from all over the country were sending money to New York to pay for their purchases. This put so much ready money in New York banks that it was unnecessary to have recourse to the federal reserve bank.

A SIGN OF PROSPERITY

This unusual type of stock market boom is causing much comment among economists and students of American financial affairs. It is regarded as an excellent sign, revealing a healthy and prosperous condition. Examination of the records shows that there has been a tremendous increase in ownership of big enterprises by the people generally. Not so long ago a stockholder in a corporation was regarded as rather a rare being. The popular conception was that the man who owned shares and received a portion of his income from dividends belonged to the Wall Street class of rich men. Nowadays a stockholder is a familiar figure. Every street car load of passengers contains perhaps a dozen stockholders in industrial enterprises.

The fresh buying movement reflected in this winter's stock market boom indicates that when the statistics are compiled it will be seen that thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands, have been added to the numbers of those who own stocks in industrial corporations.

In 1900 there were only 4,400,000 stockholders in all companies in the United States. Each stockholder held on an average of 140 shares. By 1917 the number had doubled, being then 8,600,000 with an average of 77 shares each. The latest figures available are for 1923, when there were 14,400,000 stockholders, each holding an average of 49 shares.

This shows that the numbers of rich men holding large interests have been heavily cut down. The average holding by the individual stockholders has been cut in three, or nearly so. By the time statistics of this winter's avalanche of popular purchasing are available it doubtless will be shown that there has been a still wider distribution.

Great corporations have encouraged the purchase of stocks by their employes and by the public generally. The American Telephone and Telegraph company is reputed to have the largest number of stockholders of any company in the country. In 1900 this company had only 7,535 stockholders, but in 1923 it had 281,149.

MANY HOLD STEEL SHARES

The United States Steel corporation in 1900 had 54,018 stockholders, while in 1923 it had 179,090. It is natural for the American mind to think of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey as a closely held corporatino, the property of the Rockefeller family. That this is far from the truth is shown by the fact that stockholders increased from 3,832 in 1900 to 81,070 in 1923.

The Pennsylvania railroad in 1900 had an unusually large number of stockholders for that period—51,543. But in the intervening period it has trebled this number and now reports 155,228.

Perhaps a more striking increase is shown by the United States Rubber company. From only 3,000 stockholders in 1900 this company has increased to 34,024 in 1923—more than tenfold.

This movement has been going on for 20 years, resulting in what is called an industrial revolution. Instead of employing the Russian system of going out and taking over property by force or by "direct action" as the Bolsheviks call it, the American people are bringing about a similar result through the peaceable and legal way of purchase. An indication of how corporate income is spreading down through the masses of the people is revealed by statistics of income prepared by the internal revenue bureau. As late as 1916 the income group having income of $20,000 a year and more received 79 per cent of all the dividends paid by American corporations. Five years later this group was receiving only 46.8 per cent or less than half of the dividends paid, persons of the lower income groups receiving the remainder.

In 1922 the income group from $1,000 to $5,000 a year received 18.4 per cent of all the dividends paid, more than one-sixth of the total corporate net income of the country. The class from $5,000 to $10,000 received 13.4 per cent of all the dividends. Thus persons receiving incomes of $10,000 a year and less received a third of all the dividend income paid by American business activity.

These dividends, of course, are in addition to the wages and salaries paid these persons. By adding together dividends and wages paid it would seem that a very large proportion of the gross income of American industry is returned to the pockets of persons of moderate means, a situation unheard of in any other country save the United States.

The statistics show that the American people as a whole, and not small groups of them, actually own American business, and this winter's active buying of stocks shows that the tendency is being carried on with acceleration.

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 17.—Possibility that the thirteenth annual international sweepstakes race will not take place on the local motor speedway on Memorial Day was emphasized in a statement by members of the Indiana legislature who are sponsoring a "blue law" program.

The legislators said they were reasonably certain that Governor Edward Jackson would not veto a measure prohibiting the holding of the speedway classic on Memorial Day, if the bill is passed by the general assembly now in session. Former Governor Warren T. McCray exercised the veto power when a similar bill came up for his approval two years ago.

It is the contention of the bill's advocates that a motor speedway race is not in keeping with the spirit of Memorial Day. Their objection is one of principle, and no opposition is voiced to holding the race at a different time.

In the event that the speedway bill becomes a law, it is understood the 500-mile event, premier of all speedway races and always participated in by the world's best drivers, will be held on some proximate date.

Entry blanks for the $50,000 prize race are in the mails, and several noted pilots already have announced they will compete again this season. T. E. Myers, secretary-treasurer of the speedway association, is in Europe attempting to interest factories on the continent in entering racing teams, as is the practice among American manufacturers.

Belgium, France and Italy will be visited by Myers before he goes to England to obtain an audience with English automobile magnates, it was said. He is to return to Indianapolis early in February. No foreign car has won a race here since the late Howard Wilcox, driving a French Peugeot, emerged the victor in 1919.

The race this year will mark the first appearance of the 122 cubic inches displacement cars on the local speedway, according to a ruling of the American Automobile association. Hhereafter racing engines will be limited to 91½ cubic inches. Conditions for the coming race are almost identical with those of the 1924 event.

The awards amount to $50,000 in cash, with the winner receiving $10,000 and the remainder graduating among the other drivers down to the tenth pilot to finish. He is given $1,400. The late Joe Boyer, in a Duesenberg, won the 1924 race, averaging 98.23 miles an hour.

Seventy-two murders, a new record, were committed in Indianapolis in 1924, according to Chief of Police H. F. Rikhoff. This was twice the number of homicides called to the attention of police in 1923.

Traffic law violators also set up a new record during the past year. Police records show 15,157 offenders were arrested, 3,187 of whom were charged with speeding.

How much do you think the United States is worth, all together, in thousands of millions of dollars?

According to the census bureau, all the property in the United States three years ago amounted to about $320,803,862,000. That means 320 times one thousand million dollars, with 803 millions to spare.

It's a great deal of money, but you may be sure that its much less than the United States is worth. Properly developed the state of Texas will be worth more than the total "wealth of the United States" as now estimated.

Nobody has the faintest idea what the real wealth of this country amounts to. In 10 years the total wealth, according to the figures above, has increased more than 72 per cent. Give this nation fifty million more inhabitants, intelligent, willing to work, and they would raise the value of the nation's property 500 per cent in half a generation.

The value of the nitrogen in the air, which men will eventually extract cheaply, could buy a dozen Rockefellers, if you could only get the wealth floating around in the air above some small state. We're very rich. Unfortunately we are not safe from attack.

President Coolidge, it is said, indorses a bill that would spend one hundred and fifty million dollars in six years, $25,000,000 a year for new federal buildings. The president's indorsement is wise. During the war there was no building, and building needs should be improved.

But this thought is recommended to the president and to his advisers. Don't overlook the fact that $200,000 worth of flying machines from a foreign country could destroy every one of the $150,000,000 worth of buildings in short order.

It would be worth while to spend a few million dollars to get the needed fighting airplanes and swift pursuit planes, if only as insurance for the billions of dollars' worth of property, open to attack in this city.

Germany and France already have their tariff troubles. Under the Dawes arrangement, Germany may now set up tariff walls against France, although she may not have an army or flying machines.

England is agitated, because the balance of trade is against her, and, as a nation not able to live on her own products, she must sell goods abroad or sink into poverty.

This country feels cheerful about business. Our trade balance for the past 12 months was more than nine hundred million dollars. The exact figures show that we sold to other nations more than we bought from them by a margin of $997,285,000. That may be good for us, although there are two views on that question. It is bad for Europe. She must get money from us to pay her debts to us. She can't manufacture the gold.

What will happen when, in the course of the Dawes plan, it becomes necessary for Germany to pay really big indemnities every year? This is an answer to that question, by one of the most important and able financiers in the country.

"Germany will say to France and England, when the indemnities become heavy, 'if you insist on payment, very well. I must cut prices to the bone and undersell you, as I CAN do in the principal markets of the world, thus throwing your workers out of employment, and your industries into d'sorder.'

"France, not much of an export nation, will tell Germany to pay in full, and do as she pleases in the world markets.

"England, on the contrary, bound to sell all over the world or stave, and with a threatening radical labor party to worry her, will demand that Germany compete on a reasonable basis, even though it might mean smaller reparations.

"Then, France and England, on opposite sides of the fence, will have to fight it out. Germany will say, truthfully, that she cannot get cash for unprecedentedly huge reparation payments, without taking world markets from other countries."

That is probably as good a description of what will happen as any. But nobody knows what the situation will really be, at any time. It is all temporizing guessing.

The half gallon can as a staple size for commodities such as oils, greases, paints, varnish and industrial compounds will gradually disappear if the standardization experts of the government and large industries are successful in their undertakings to do away with so many sizes in their efforts to simplify industries. APPENDICITIS FIEND IS ANGRY BECAUSE OPERATION WAS FAKE

SOFIA—Sofia has an appendicitis fiend, perhaps the first in history.

More than a year ago the wife of a prominent Sofia business man complained of pains in her right side and decided immediately that she was suffering from appendicitis.

Specialists in Sofia and Vienna who examined her declared she was in perfect physicial condition with not even the faintest suggestion of appendicitis.

But the pains, according to the woman, continued to bother her and she finally persuaded Dr. Paltcheff to operate. She left the hospital declaring herself to be in excellent health.

For a year eveerything went fine, but recently the woman met on the street the nurse who had attended her in the hospital.

The joke was too good to keep so the nurse informed her former patient that the operation was a fake and that the skin only had been cut.

Immediately the pains returned, according to the self-acclaimed victim and again she is besieging Dr. Paltcheff to remove her appendix.

The doctor in a quandry. If he doesn't remove the woman's appendix he is liable to prosecution for performing a bogus operation. But the woman is entirely well. He is considering the possibility of operating upon a real appendicitis patient at the same time and showing the would be chronic sufferer the other woman's appendix as her own.

But the pains, according to the woman, continued to bother her and she finally persuaded Dr. Paltcheff to operate. She left the hospital declaring herself to be in excellent health.

For a year eveerything went fine, but recently the woman met on the street the nurse who had attended her in the hospital.

The joke was too good to keep so the nurse informed her former patient that the operation was a fake and that the skin only had been cut.

Immediately the pains returned, according to the self-acclaimed victim and again she is besieging Dr. Paltcheff to remove her appendix.

The doctor in a quandry. If he doesn't remove the woman's appendix he is liable to prosecution for performing a bogus operation. But the woman is entirely well. He is considering the possibility of operating upon a real appendicitis patient at the same time and showing the would be chronic sufferer the other woman's appendix as her own.

Senate Still Deadlocked.

West Virginia state senate is still unorganized as the result of the action of two insurgent senators who decline to attend the sessions. Several ballots were taken yesterday but no presiding officer was named.

The house which met and organized promptly, adjourned until Monday when it is expected the deadlock in the upper chamber will be broken.

Life Budgets Proposed.

Several colleges, looking to modern needs in the curriculum, have included in their new courses one for "life budgeing" which means not only training on how to budget and spend financial income, but also on budgeting time, including leisure, work, reading and other pursuits. This is felt necessary partly because organized labor is getting a gradual reduction in working hours, leaving more and more leisure, a great deal of which, it is said, is now wasted in a way that does as much physical harm as the surcease from too much work does good.

Watch Has Novel Prototypes.

Polite Parisian society used the watch in the sixteenth century when it became bad form for the guest or host to look at it to note the time. To avoid this embarrassment, a watchmaker originated a timepiece that had raised hands and time could be told by feeling it inside the pocket. Another ingenious device for telling time in the dark was a clock that had on its dial twelve small cups each filled with a different spice. The one seeking the time would feel around the dial to where the hands were and then taste the spice.

Spare the Choke Lessen the Carbon

The use of Freedom Oil may not eliminate entirely the formation of carbon. If you use your choke too much, you cause a mixture overly rich in gasoline to be drawn into your motor. The excessive amount of carbon in this mixture does not burn completely and carbon is deposited.

Use Freedom Gas and Oil—disengage your clutch before starting—your machine will turn over easier and start more quickly—and you will need use your choke only sparingly.

1.—Do you think the various religious denominations will unite during the next five years?

Hear Dr. Cadman on this matter. He says: "I wouldn't want them to do that. It would be a case of marrying in haste and repenting at leasure. Let them get acquainted with each other and unite in common service for great needs, then we shall know that some of the loveliest servants of God are among our Roman Catholic brethren and our Hebrew brethren. I started in thinging God was a Methodist. I have to broaden out."

2.—What may be regarded as the most vital influence against the modern Christian home?

Too many parents are not living the Christian life, as they should live it; they are not setting the example worthy for their children to follow.

The growth of cities, the unparalleled development of all sorts of appliances; now there are a thousand and one interests which did not predominate in the old domestic home; the pulling down of the family altar so that folks don't pray at home, at church or anywhere else; deficiency in the religious education of children on part of parents.

We have had enough of armchair, pulpit or merely "spoken" Christianity. What is needed is to put Christianity in action on the stage of history, and make it a dominating social force. The trouble with our religion is that it remains an unacted drama in our social life.—L. P. Jacks.

What the Sunday School Is Studying

WHAT THE SUNDAY SCHOOL IS STUDYING.

The Memorial Supper—The Meaning of the Communion Service.

International Lesson for January 18.

By JAMES H. SNOWDEN, D. D.

Memorials have deep and tender significance, and this memorial supper is one of the most important and precious events in the history of our Christian faith and life. We do not know where was this upper room in which the memorial was celebrated; the birthplace of great events are often lost in oblivion. But from this unknown chamber issued a stream of blessing that has flowed down through the ages and will continue to bless the world "till he come."

The Betrayal.

In the evening the little company of Jesus and his disciples gathered in the appointed place and the Passover meal began. As they were sitting down occurred the unseemly strife among the disciples as to who should be greatest, followed by the beautiful condescension and humility of Jesus in washing their feet. Selfishness pushed its ugly presence into this holy hour, and our best movements are often marred with evil suggestions. As they were eating the disciples were startled by the sudden announcement of Jesus: "Behold, the hand that betrayeth me is with me on the table." The unexpected disclosure filled the disciples with alarm. Such baseness excited their horror. Could it be possible there was such treachery lurking among them? "And they began to inquire among themselves, which of them it was that should do this thing," and to say is it I?" They did not begin to point the finger at one another and say, "is it you? Is this baseness lying coiled up in your heart?" Our first impulse often is to think others worse than ourselves, and we may impute to them evil that we never suspect in our own hearts. But there are hidden possibilities of evil in us of which we may be seldom or never conscious, and we need to keep in close acquaintance with our hearts and never assume that we may not be guilty of the deepest sin.

Bread and Cup.

As they were eating the Passover Jesus "took bread and gave thanks and broke it, and gave unto them saying, This is my body which is given for you; this do in remembrance of me. Likewise the cup" The Lord's supper was not an abrupt creation, but a further evolution. The new ordinance grew out of the old and was the fulfillment and perfect blossom of the past. These few simple words are one of the most deeply significant and sacred passages of Scripture. Here we are on holy ground and our meditation should be pervaded with tender reverence. These emblems are rich in ideas. The great central idea is that of sacrifice. The cross has a blood-red heart. The broken bread represents the broken body, and the poured-out cup the shed blood, of Christ. The scarlet thread of sacrifice is woven into the whole web of the universe. The mother lays her life on the altar of sacrifice for her child, and the father will surrender all, even life itself for his wandering boy. These are but drops of sacrifice from the heart of God. The supreme instance of sacrifice is the cross of Calvary on which the Son of God freely gave himself for us. The sign seems insignificant and yet how deeply laden with precious truth it is. The meaning of any sign is not to be measured by the sign itself. The flag of our country is only so much colored silk or cheap muslin, and yet what a mighty meaning does it carry wherever it floats, representing the law and order, the power and majesty, the history and glory of a great nation. A little lock of hair carefully preserved may seem to the undiscerning eye of a stranger of slight significance, but to the bereaved mother it suggests thoughts and memories that are too deep for tears. So this bread and cup may seem common and meaningless to the world, but to believers through all the ages they have been and are precious beyond any other symbol in the world.

Remembrance.

Why did Jesus want to be remembered? Partly for his own sake. He had a human craving for such remembrance and the thought that he would be forgotten and his very name lost in oblivion would have been painful to him. And Jesus wanted us to remember him for our own sake. Memory is one of the ties that bind us to him, a vital artery through which his teaching and influences and life pass into us and become incorporated in our life. How slender and frail seems the thread of continuity and yet how long it has lasted. How perishable are the elements and yet how imperishable is the memorial. This bread and cup are the only material monument Jesus Christ left to his memory. It seems frailer than a spider's web and yet it has survived through all the revolutions of nineteen centuries, outlasting cities and empires. It must have in it some substance and vitality and supreme worth that the world will not let die. It has deep rich roots, but it has not yet come to the perfect blossom and ripe fruit and its greatest significance is yet to be fulfilled.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes —Most Women Can Have.

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician.

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit. 15c and 30c.

Hen Lays All Eggs In House.

Miss Hattie G. Mayo, of Whitman, Mass., reports a hen that during the laying season, regularly comes to the back door and clucks to be let in. When the door is opened it goes up two flights of stairs, lays an egg in a chosen spot used regularly, and then goes down clucking as it goes out the door to tell the glad tidings.

The Sensation of the New York Show

59,167 People thronged the New York City Salesroom in one Week

In the record-breaking crowds were nearly all the competitive dealers and salesmen in New York. They hurried in to study this car—and went away wondering, questioning whether Willys-Overland could continue to produce such a remarkable Sedan at such a remarkably low price. But let Willys-Overland worry about that! ¶A low-priced Overland has been the leader of the Willys-Overland line for fifteen years. This new all-steel model is the leader for 1925. ¶The new Overland Sedan is the lowest priced Sedan in the world with a body entirely of steel. That means greater strength, greater protection, longer life—the greater safety of greater driving vision! A full 5-passenger Sedan with four doors at a price heretofore considered impossible!

SERMONOGRAMS

Busy hours make short days.

Thinking of others is a good habit.

Practice faithfully what you profess.

That only is important which is eternal.

Judge your own life before judging others.

The greatest loss a man ever suffers is that of an ideal.

A food famine is fatal, but what of a spiritual famine?

Until we are willing for God to guide us, we are not willing for God to help us.

The rage and violence of public war—what is it but a suspension of justice among the warring parties.—Hume.

At the harvest the same kind of seed is reaped that was planted. What are you sowing.

A pessimist sees a difficulty in every opportunity. An optimist sees an opportunity in every difficulty.

A Cleveland man reports that he saw carved on a New York Church door the words, "The Gate to Heaven," and below on a sign—"Closed for the summer."

You can kill a man's body and the law will punish you; but you can by word or deed wound his soul nigh unto death and get away with it.

Life is what we are alive to. It is not length but breath. To be alive only to appetite, pleasure, pride, money, making, and not to goodness and kindness, purity and love, history, poetry and music, flowers, stars, God and eternal hope, is all but to be dead.

We have had enough of armchair, pulpit or merely "spoken" Christianity. What is needed is to put Christianity in action on the stage of history, and make it a dominating social force. The trouble with our religion is that it remains an unacted drama in our social life.—L. P. Jacks.

What the Sunday School Is Studying

WHAT THE SUNDAY SCHOOL IS STUDYING.

The Memorial Supper—The Meaning of the Communion Service. Luke 22:14-23.

International Lesson for January 18. By JAMES H. SNOWDEN, D. D.

Memorials have deep and tender significance, and this memorial supper is one of the most important and precious events in the history of our Christian faith and life. We do not know where was this upper room in which the memorial was celebrated; the birthplace of great events are often lost in oblivion. But from this unknown chamber issued a stream of blessing that has flowed down through the ages and will continue to bless the world "till he come."

The Betrayal.

In the evening the little company of Jesus and his disciples gathered in the appointed place and the Passover meal began. As they were sitting down occurred the unseemly strife among the disciples as to who should be greatest, followed by the beautiful condescension and humility of Jesus in washing their feet. Selfishness pushed its ugly presence into this holy hour, and our best movements are often marred with evil suggestions. As they were eating the disciples were startled by the sudden announcement of Jesus: "Behold, the hand that betrayeth me is with me on the table." The unexpected disclosure filled the disciples with alarm. Such baseness excited their horror. Could it be possible there was such treachery lurking among them? "And they began to inquire among themselves, which of them it was that should do this thing," and to say is it I?" They did not begin to point the finger at one another and say, "is it you? Is this baseness lying coiled up in your heart?" Our first impulse often is to think others worse than ourselves, and we may impute to them evil that we never suspect in our own hearts. But there are hidden possibilities of evil in us of which we may be seldom or never conscious, and we need to keep in close acquaintance with our hearts and never assume that we may not be guilty of the deepest sin.

Bread and Cup.

As they were eating the Passover Jesus "took bread and gave thanks and broke it, and gave unto them saying, This is my body which is given for you; this do in remembrance of me. Likewise the cup" The Lord's supper was not an abrupt creation, but a further evolution. The new ordinance grew out of the old and was the fulfillment and perfect blossom of the past. These few simple words are one of the most deeply significant and sacred passages of Scripture. Here we are on holy ground and our meditation should be pervaded with tender reverence. These emblems are rich in ideas. The great central idea is that of sacrifice. The cross has a blood-red heart. The broken bread represents the broken body, and the poured-out cup the shed blood, of Christ. The scarlet thread of sacrifice is woven into the whole web of the universe. The mother lays her life on the altar of sacrifice for her child, and the father will surrender all, even life itself for his wandering boy. These are but drops of sacrifice from the heart of God. The supreme instance of sacrifice is the cross of Calvary on which the Son of God freely gave himself for us. The sign seems insignificant and yet how deeply laden with precious truth it is. The meaning of any sign is not to be measured by the sign itself. The flag of our country is only so much colored silk or cheap muslin, and yet what a mighty meaning does it carry wherever it floats, representing the law and order, the power and majesty, the history and glory of a great nation. A little lock of hair carefully preserved may seem to the undiscerning eye of a stranger of slight significance, but to the bereaved mother it suggests thoughts and memories that are too deep for tears. So this bread and cup may seem common and meaningless to the world, but to believers through all the ages they have been and are precious beyond any other symbol in the world.

Remembrance.

Why did Jesus want to be remembered? Partly for his own sake. He had a human craving for such remembrance and the thought that he would be forgotten and his very name lost in oblivion would have been painful to him. And Jesus wanted us to remember him for our own sake. Memory is one of the ties that bind us to him, a vital artery through which his teaching and influences and life pass into us and become incorporated in our life. How slender and frail seems the thread of continuity and yet how long it has lasted. How perishable are the elements and yet how imperishable is the memorial. This bread and cup are the only material monument Jesus Christ left to his memory. It seems frailer than a spider's web and yet it has survived through all the revolutions of nineteen centuries, outlasting cities and empires. It must have in it some substance and vitality and supreme worth that the world will not let die. It has deep rich roots, but it has not yet come to the perfect blossom and ripe fruit and its greatest significance is yet to be fulfilled.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes —Most Women Can Have.

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician.

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit. 15c and 30c.

Hen Lays All Eggs In House.

Miss Hattie U. Mayo, of Whitman, Mass., reports a hen that during the laying season, regularly comes to the back door and clucks to be let in. When the door is opened it goes up two flights of stairs, lays an egg in a chosen spot used regularly, and then goes down clucking as it goes out the door to tell the glad tidings.

The Sensation of the New York Show

59,167 People thronged the New York City Salesroom in one Week

In the record-breaking crowds were nearly all the competitive dealers and salesmen in New York. They hurried in to study this car—and went away wondering, questioning whether Willys-Overland could continue to produce such a remarkable Sedan at such a remarkably low price. But let Willys-Overland worry about that! ¶A low-priced Overland has been the leader of the Willys-Overland line for fifteen years. This new all-steel model is the leader for 1925. ¶The new Overland Sedan is the lowest priced Sedan in the world with a body entirely of steel. That means greater strength, greater protection, longer life—the greater safety of greater driving vision! A full 5-passenger Sedan with four doors at a price heretofore considered impossible!

There are 7,046 Christian schools and colleges in China with 240,000 students.

The present rate of church accessions in India to the Methodist Episcopal churches is 30,000 annually.

Of the 200 Y. M. C. A. secretaries maintained by the Associations of America in the over-seas service, 104 are located in China.

Church attendance in Korea is two and nine-tenths times its communicant membership, thus having the world's record in church attendance.

The largest church in the world is the Ongole, India, Baptist church in the Telegu country, having a membership of 48,411 with 150,000 under instruction.

Justice Ford, in the controversy between the two branches of the Russian Orthodox Church in this country, has ruled in favor of the older church and against the representative of the church which has recognized the Soviet Government.

The American Education Digest gives the following tabulated percentage 24½c out of every dollar living costs, luxuries 22, waste 14, investment 11c, crime 8½c, government 4½c, schools 1½c, church ¾c. Waste and crime together cost us 30 times as much as the church.

It is not yet forty years since the first Protestant missionary landed in Korea, when there were six Christians in the country. Today they number 300,000, have 3,400 churches, 20,000 pupils in mission schools, and last year treated 250,000 in their hospitals.

The following may indicate the signs of the times' among the women of the world: In Turkey, women in small but significant numbers have bounded forward politically. Not long since a Japanese woman won a breach of promise suit—which shows an amazing break with the social past of the country. In China the olan family system is gradually breaking down, and there is deep anxiety as to what will take place. Numerous local organizations of women in China concern themselves with the passage of laws dealing with the age of consent, the abolition of prostitution, concubinage, the selling of maid-servants, and foot-binding. In India types of women are emerging which indicate that we may expect in the coming days spiritual leaders, social reformers, writers, altruists, women who in any land would hold a foremost place. In Japan and China women journalists, editors, writers, doctors, philanthropists, bankers, are all in evidence. A Chinese woman attended the International Labor Conference at Geneva in 1921.

LIVE QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

"THE LORD'S SUPPER,
Luke 22:14-23,
For Sunday, January 18th.

1. What previous teachings of Christ should have enabled the disciples to better understand the meaning of the Lord's Supper?

2. Why does eating and drinking furnish such a strong illustration of the indwelling of Christ?

3. In what way may we betray the Lord? What warning does Paul give about communing unworthily? (2 Cor. 11:27). How may we prepare ourselves worthily to partake of the sacrament? 1 Cor. 11:28. What should be our attitude, our thoughts, during the administration of the sacrament?

4. What words in the last prayer with his followers (in the upper room) belong most certainly to ourselves, his last followers?

CLERICUS: The significance of any sign is not to be measured by the nature of the sign itself. The flag of our country is only so much colored silk or cheap muslin, yet what a mighty meaning it carries wherever it floats, representing law and order, the power and majesty, the history and glory of a great nation. A little lock of hair carefully preserved may seem to a stranger a thing of slight significance, but to the bereaved mother it suggests thoughts and memories that are too deep for tears. So this bread and cup may seem meaningless to the world, but to believers they are precious beyond any other symbol in the world. J. H. Snowden says "If Christ is ever forgotten in this world, Christianity will wither and be blown away and itself be forgotten."

Lesson Prayer.

How very many times, dear Lord, we have remembered what thou hast done for us—so lightly. How many times we have approached the communion table with wandering thoughts. Forgive our indifference and divided interests. Open our eyes in our study today that we may see the truth of thy covenant relationship in the broken body and shed blood of our Christ. In thy dear name we pray. Amen.

Periodical Review.

China's Cotton Industry Grows

China, a land of many obsolete industrial activities, has one industry that is almost modern in every sense. It is cotton which is rapidly developing into a major industry. It employs much cheap labor including that of children, of course, but its machinery and methods are up to date. Its greatest weakness is in the scientific management of the factories, but this is being overcome by the bringing in of foreign experts.

Troubled With Pimples Two Years Cuticura Healed

"My skin began to itch and burn and hard, large, red pimples broke out on my face, shoulders and arms. The pimples festered and scaled over and my face looked terrible. My clothing rubbed against the pimples on my shoulders and caused them to bleed. The irritation caused me to scratch the pimples, and the scratching caused terrible eruptions. I lost my rest at night on account of the irritation.

"The trouble lasted about two years before I started using Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after using about five cakes of Soap and one box of Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Miss Imogene Thomas, R. R. 8, Kokomo, Ind., Aug. 2, 1924.

A TISSUE BUILDER

One of the important laws of health is to safeguard the quality of the blood, for good, red blood builds up the tissues. The food we eat and the food our parents ate, is a factor, also the air we breathe day and night, and the kind of water we drink, absolute purity is a requisite, and we owe it to ourselves and to those who come after us to keep the blood pure. A graduate of Philadelphia and Cincinnati Medical Schools was Dr. R. V. Pierce, who early practiced in Pennsylvania, and became famous. He was a student of life problems, and had great faith in Nature's healing through the herbs and roots, such as were used by the Indians, and, after careful analyses of their different qualities, compounded the Golden Medical Discovery, which met with such phenomenal success that a wider field was necessary, and he removed to Buffalo, N. Y., where he became a leading citizen and Representative in Congress, built up a splendid business, and founded the famous Invalids Hotel. Dr. Pierce's name is alone a guarantee of the purity of the Golden Medical Discovery, which has helped thousands for over fifty years, and many unsolicited testimonials bear witness to its value as a tonic.

Sold by all druggists, in liquid or tablet form, or send 10 cents for trial sample to Dr. Pierce's Invalids Hotel, 665 Main Stret, Buffalo, N. Y., and write for free medical advice.

HOME TRAINING

A Good Home Reborn.

John Dey, employed in a large factory—the Truman Manufacturing company, refused to join in the strike because, in the first place he needed the income to suport his widowed mother, and in the second place, there was no good reason for the strike and it might be amicably settled.

John addressed a mass meeting of the employees saying, "If you will come back tomorrow I will see to it that you all get your jobs back." They agreed to return to work.

John Dey had been falsely accused at the beginning of the strike by the superintenednt an ill-tempered man, and because John denied the charge, the superintendent undertook to beat him up, but so utterly failed that he resigned his position the next day.

John Dey who had proven himself fit as a leader because of experiences showing honesty, tact, honorable ambition, with a brotherly spirit, had an interview with the owner of the plant presenting the situation and suggesting the right way of settlement which was accepted by the management.

At a called meeting of employees the terms of settlement were presented by the president and owner and John Dey was announced the new superintendent, news of which not only produced a demonstration of praise and praise and approval but settled all future difficulties.

To John Dey's mother belongs the praise and credit for the changed program in the Truman Manufacturing company, which made possible happy homes for all the employees.

D. CARL YODER.

Nelson's Column Is Huge.

The proportions of Nelson's column in Trafalgar Square, which place in London is dedicated to the famous officer, are still considered huge. The figure of Nelson alone is 17 feet high and the distance from the heel to the toe of the foot is three-quarters of a yard. The total cost was about $250,000, of which $100,000 was raised by popular subscription and the balance voted by parliament.

The largest church in the world is the Ongole, India, Baptist church in the Telegu country, having a membership of 48,411 with 150,000 under instruction.

Justice Ford, in the controversy between the two branches of the Russian Orthodox Church in this country, has ruled in favor of the older church and against the representative of the church which has recognized the Soviet Government.

The American Education Digest gives the following tabulated percentage 24½c out of every dollar living costs, luxuries 22, waste 14, investment 11c, crime 8½c, government 4½c, schools 1½c, church ¾c. Waste and crime together cost us 30 times as much as the church.

It is not yet forty years since the first Protestant missionary landed in Korea, when there were six Christians in the country. Today they number 300,000, have 3,400 churches, 20,000 pupils in mission schools, and last year treated 250,000 in their hospitals.

According to Dr. John R. Mott "more Moslems visited Paris last year than made the pilgrimage to Mecca, which is an indication of the vast changes taking place in Islam. The Near East looks upon America as the land of hope.

The following may indicate the signs of the times' among the women of the world: In Turkey, women in small but significant numbers have bounded forward politically. Not long since a Japanese woman won a breach of promise suit—which shows an amazing break with the social past of the country. In China the olan family system is gradually breaking down, and there is deep anxiety as to what will take place. Numerous local organizations of women in China concern themselves with the passage of laws dealing with the age of consent, the abolition of prostitution, concubinage, the selling of maid-servants, and foot-binding. In India types of women are emerging which indicate that we may expect in the coming days spiritual leaders, social reformers, writers, altruists, women who in any land would hold a foremost place. In Japan and China women journalists, editors, writers, doctors, philanthropists, bankers, are all in evidence. A Chinese woman attended the International Labor Conference at Geneva in 1921.

LIVE QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

"THE LORD'S SUPPER,
Luke 22:14-23,
For Sunday, January 18th.

1. What previous teachings of Christ should have enabled the disciples to better understand the meaning of the Lord's Supper?
2. Why does eating and drinking furnish such a strong illustration of the indwelling of Christ?
3. In what way may we betray the Lord? What warning does Paul give about communing unworthily? (2 Cor. 11:27). How may we prepare ourselves worthily to partake of the sacrament? 1 Cor. 11:28. What should be our attitude, our thoughts, during the administration of the sacrament?
4. What words in the last prayer with his followers (in the upper room) belong most certainly to ourselves, his last followers?

CLERICUS: The significance of any sign is not to be measured by the nature of the sign itself. The flag of our country is only so much colored silk or cheap muslin, yet what a mighty meaning it carries wherever it floats, representing law and order, the power and majesty, the history and glory of a great nation. A little lock of hair carefully preserved may seem to a stranger a thing of slight significance, but to the bereaved mother it suggests thoughts and memories that are too deep for tears. So this bread and cup may seem meaningless to the world, but to believers they are precious beyond any other symbol in the world. J. H. Snowden says "If Christ is ever forgotten in this world, Christianity will wither and be blown away and itself be forgotten."

Lesson Prayer.

How very many times, dear Lord, we have remembered what thou hast done for us—so lightly. How many times we have approached the communion table with wandering thoughts. Forgive our indifference and divided interests. Open our eyes in our study today that we may see the truth of thy covenant relationship in the broken body and shed blood of our Christ. In thy dear name we pray. Amen.

A TISSUE BUILDER

One of the important laws of health is to safeguard the quality of the blood, for good, red blood builds up the tissues. The food we eat and the food our parents ate, is a factor, also the air we breathe day and night, and the kind of water we drink, absolute purity is a requisite, and we owe it to ourselves and to those who come after us to keep the blood pure. A graduate of Philadelphia and Cincinnati Medical Schools was Dr. R. V. Pierce, who early practiced in Pennsylvania, and became famous. He was a student of life problems, and had great faith in Nature's healing through the herbs and roots, such as were used by the Indians, and, after careful analyses of their different qualities, compounded the Golden Medical Discovery, which met with such phenomenal success that a wider field was necessary, and he removed to Buffalo, N. Y., where he became a leading citizen and Representative in Congress, built up a splendid business, and founded the famous Invalids Hotel. Dr. Pierce's name is alone a guarantee of the purity of the Golden Medical Discovery, which has helped thousands for over fifty years, and many unsolicited testimonials bear witness to its value as a tonic.

Sold by all druggists, in liquid or tablet form, or send 10 cents for trial sample to Dr. Pierce's Invalids Hotel, 665 Main Stret, Buffalo, N. Y., and write for free medical advice.

China's Cotton Industry Grows

China, a land of many obsolete industrial activities, has one industry that is almost modern in every sense. It is cotton which is rapidly developing into a major industry. It employs much cheap labor including that of children, of course, but its machinery and methods are up to date. Its greatest weakness is in the scientific management of the factories, but this is being overcome by the bringing in of foreign experts.

Troubled With Pimples Two Years Cuticura Healed

"My skin began to itch and burn and hard, large, red pimples broke out on my face, shoulders and arms. The pimples festered and scaled over and my face looked terrible. My clothing rubbed against the pimples on my shoulders and caused them to bleed. The irritation caused me to scratch the pimples, and the scratching caused terrible eruptions. I lost my rest at night on account of the irritation.

"The trouble lasted about two years before I started using Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after using about five cakes of Soap and one box of Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Miss Imogene Thomas, R. R. 8, Kokomo, Ind., Aug. 2, 1924.

HOME TRAINING

A Good Home Reborn.

John Dey, employed in a large factory—the Truman Manufacturing company, refused to join in the strike because, in the first place he needed the income to suport his widowed mother, and in the second place, there was no good reason for the strike and it might be amicably settled.

John addressed a mass meeting of the employees saying, "If you will come back tomorrow I will see to it that you all get your jobs back." They agreed to return to work.

John Dey had been falsely accused at the beginning of the strike by the superintenednt an ill-tempered man, and because John denied the charge, the superintendent undertook to beat him up, but so utterly failed that he resigned his position the next day.

John Dey who had proven himself fit as a leader because of experiences showing honesty, tact, honorable ambition, with a brotherly spirit, had an interview with the owner of the plant presenting the situation and suggesting the right way of settlement which was accepted by the management.

At a called meeting of employees the terms of settlement were presented by the president and owner and John Dey was announced the new superintendent, news of which not only produced a demonstration of praise and praise and approval but settled all future difficulties.

To John Dey's mother belongs the praise and credit for the changed program in the Truman Manufacturing company, which made possible happy homes for all the employees.

Nelson's Column Is Huge.

The proportions of Nelson's column in Trafalgar Square, which place in London is dedicated to the famous officer, are still considered huge. The figure of Nelson alone is 17 feet high and the distance from the heel to the toe of the foot is three-quarters of a yard. The total cost was about $250,000, of which $100,000 was raised by popular subscription and the balance voted by parliament.

THE DOUBLE HOUSE

By Elizabeth DeJeans

Rossiter looked down on a foreshortened view of Clarice's face, white now and lips compressed. "You see, Clarice, there is no use wasting your time hating Mrs. Kaime. She is big—she has friends all around her. I'm one of them and I'll see that she doesn't get hurt. . . . There's another thing I want to tell you—this crowd you've been running with are after your money. I'm not naming any one, but there are two men you know who are trying to promote a so-called motion-picture company which is as much of a fake as any wildcat oil scheme. They call themselves motion-picture people. They're not—they want someone with money and no experience whom they can bleed. They know you're going to have plenty of money—you're exactly what those men want, what they call a 'movie-sucker.'"

Rossiter took the paper from her knee, thrust it under his arm, and looked at her sunny head, waves of red-gold tumbled like a child's. He had the perverse desire to smooth it. But he had had his lesson; besides, Clarice's face was set hard, like Dascome's. "When life didn't turn out as Karesia expected it to, she got out and made something of herself, and without any millions to help her, either," he said coolly. "I doubt if you could do it—I like the sort of woman who can."

He turned about, took his box of flowers, and went out.

XXV

After that bit of publicity in one of the Los Angeles dailies life took on a different aspect for Karesia. She was no longer a recluse. How the paper had obtained its information, Karesia did not know, and Rossiter said that he had had no hand in it. Karesia had so carefully avoided everything of the sort. She had hoped intensely that she might remain undiscovered until she had obtained a divorce from Randsome Favrique. As Rossiter had said, she had come to it by degrees, the determination to be free, if possible. It did not matter now, she was not afraid of the reporters who came to her for interviews.

For Rossiter's reappearance had scattered Karesia's plans as completely as a gale scatters dry leaves heaped by a child a play. For five years they had gone their separate ways under a misconception; her letter offering to return to him had never reached him. Each had thought hardly of the other while five years had moulded them into what they were, different beings.

"We have both changed so completely," Karesia told Rossiter again and again.

"You're exactly the same, only more lovable, and I'm a better sort, Kara dear," he urged. "Give me a chance and I'll make you love me as you are capable of loving now, with all the devotion in you, the sort of thing that has faith and forgives."

He had gained in character; Karesia granted it; he had lost none of his charm, yet he was resolute and capable. He would always have the actor's temperament; Jules Favrique and his father before him had been bred on the stage. But there was Rossiter blood in him as well, the "thrifty, solid bourgeois," as he had characterized his uncle Rossiter. The fascinating, tempestuous young man in whom Karesia had lost faith had developed into a man of affairs.

Karesia told Rossiter that she was determined upon one thing; she must love completely the man to whom she gave herself; it was the only foundation for marriage. When no older than Clarice, she had married Edward Kaime, her father's friend, a man more than twice her age, simply because she was orphaned and desolate and he had loved her. She had known no better. When widowed, Rossiter had swept into her life, an utter stranger, but vivid with youth and charm, gaiety and love—and she had married him. By a single act, he had shocked her into flight. She had not loved him, or she would have clung to him and have forgiven; she had loved only his youth and charm; she had made her second great mistake. And he had loved her after the same fashion, not deeply, or he would have followed her in spite of everything. Their structure had crumbled as soon as a puff of wind had struck it, for it had no real foundation. She told Rossiter so.

"We didn't build very well," he agreed, "but we're going to do better next time." He refrained from many caresses, but he kissed her then, both tenderly and passionately. "In spite of everything you have been the one real love of my life, and you did love me dearly. Both you and I have thought that there might be someone else whom we could love, but we were mistaken."

Karesia flushed warmly enough under his caress; she flushed at the oblique reference to Dascome, too. . . . It was an odd pact between husband and wife; their respective houses faced each other and between them was the cleft of canyon. Rossiter asserted no claim; he courted her as he had five years before, only more resolutely, less tempestuously, a devoted lover. It was chivalrous; it was lovable. It appealed to Karesia; she felt that it would end in her crossing the canyon, fulfilling her promise made five years ago, of "for better or for worse." Yet the ache deep within her did not wear away; life seemed to be closing in on her instead of widening. Her increasing activities, the social life into which Rossiter led her, was a pleasant surface matter; beneath it was unrest.

She was busy enough, no time for brooding. A few days had been sufficient for her house-settling, and the diminutive Japanese who padded about her house during the day and withdrew to his own menage at night was a comfort. To Karesia's joy, he proved an excellent chauffeur as well. Herbert Colt had telegraphed from San Francisco: "Have a clue to your paintings. Don't worry, I'll get them for you in time."

That was a satisfaction and it was a great satisfaction to destroy Mary Bliss' scant wardrobe and outfit her in new clothes, dainty silk things which Mary Bliss handled lovingly. Karesia discovered that Mary Bliss was skilful with a needle and that as long as there was a pile of sewing beside her she was content. At first she had trouble with her poor stiff hands, but Karesia herself massaged them and put her to bed with medicated gloves, which soon softened the callouses. Then Mary Bliss' gnarled hands began to look less pitiful.

Farce, Brimming With Mirth Provoking Situations, Comes to Ceramic Theatre Next Thursday.

Referring to the comedy success, "Meet the Wife," which comes to the Ceramic here next Thursday evening, the Huntington, W. Va., Herald Dispatch says:

"Meet the Wife," developed the fact before the doubly appreciative audience at the Huntington theatre last night, that there is occasionally something new in comedy plots. It merited a capacity house.

"It is doubtful if there has ever been presented in this city a farce of such a thoroughly delightful character or one so brimming with mirth provoking situations. And the principals in the cast are fully up to every situation.

"When two husbands married to the same woman meet on common ground that which eventuates usually creates an interesting scene. None can forsee just what either will do, but here the author has taken this selfsame situation and turned it deftly into one of the most perfect vehicles of laughter imaginable.

"In commenting on this play one must pay tribute to Augusta Boylston as the twice-married and bossy wife; Donald Campbell as the browbeaten second husband and Messenger Bellis as the first husband who deserted the matrimonial craft in an earthquake for the great world of liberty.

"The story on which the play is based is clever and scintillates with exceptional situations. Husband number two stumbles, through the machinations of Fate, into the home of husband number one, directed and managed, of course by the wife of both. The men become good friends until husband number two has the bombshell of revelation exploded beneath him. He, feeling that had his predecessor not run away from friend wife, he, himself would be a free agent, glorying in the liberty he wanted but didn't have the courage to take. But the humor of the situation strikes them and they laugh it off.

"Augusta Boylston is a charming woman who has carried an undeniably wonderful personality behind the footlights and in the role of the bossy wife who insists on ruling or ruining, she keeps her audience in the throes of merriment constantly. At times one finds just a hint of suggestiveness in the situations and lines but it it such perfectly natural suggestiveness that one feels no sense of resentment—not even the most finicky.

THRIFT WEEK OBSERVED HERE

Building Association and Postal Department Co-operate.

Local organizations are co-operating in the annual observance of Thrift week which began today and will close next Friday.

The Ohio Building Association League and the postoffice department aer taking part in the observance which is nation-wide in scope. Postmaster Edwin McClure has been asked to point out to the public the advantages of thrift during the present campaign and encourage the use of the postal Savings department.

The postal Savings department, of which every postoffice is a depository, differs from the ordinary savings banks. A depositor may deposit any amount from $1 to $2,500 at any time. Deposits are evidenced in non-negotiable and non-transferable certificates and draw interest at the rate of two per cent a year. Deposits are payable to the depositor upon demand at the postoffice at which the account is kept. Withdrawals may also be made by mail.

Amounts less than $1 may be saved by purchasing postal savings stamps at 10 cents each. A postal savings card with 10 savings stamps will be accepted as a deposit of $1 either in opening a new account or in adding to an existing one, or it may be redeemed in cash. Accounts may be transferred from one postoffice to another without loss of interest or without cost to the depositor.

The Ohio Building Association League, of which local building and loan associations are members, is especially interested in Thrift Day, Tuesday, January 20; Own Your Own Home Day, Wednesday, January 21, and Safe Investment Day, Friday, January 23.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS
BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Old Enough To Decide.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young woman 24 years old. I am very unhappy. About three years ago I met a young man about my age, but I did not go with him many times as I did not care for him. Shortly after this I met another young man, two years older than I am. I am still keeping company with him and love him very much. He has asked me to marry him several times, but I didn't know what to do. My parents want me to marry the other man because he is wealthy. They have some fault to find with every young man I go with. My father told me that I could not come home if I married the second young man. But he is very kind to me. He has no bad habits. My mother would hardly know him if she saw him. Please advise me what to do. F. A. R.

At the age of 24 you are old enough to follow the dictates of your own heart. I think that three years has been quite a test of your love and since you and the young man still care for each other and want to marry now, you should not let any one stand in the way of your love. When parents are fair in their criticisms they should be heeded, but when they are unjust and unreasonable their stand in the matter should be disregarded. A girl knows in her own heart, as a rule, when her parents are fair. So often a mother and father do everything in their power to prevent their daughter's marriage to a selfish, worthless man, only to be ignored by the daughter. In the end, however, she pays dearly for her willfulness. Look into the future, my dear, and if you feel sure you have found the man you want for a life mate, marry him.

A Lonely Youth.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been in this town eight months and have never had a date with any girl here. Several people where I am staying have asked if I never go out. I just don't know anybody. I am not the kind to go up and ask a girl if I don't know her. Until now I have had many friends wherever I have been. How can I get acquainted, as I am awfully lonesome? LONELY.

No doubt the people with whom you are associated are busy with their own affairs and they don't stop to realize that you are a stranger and lonely and that a kind word would mean a lot to you. When people mention the fact that you do not go anywhere, say frankly that you are not acquainted here and that you have no place to go. Also say that you would appreciate a few introductions and help in making friends. Look about you at your place of business and if you see some girl who appeals to you cultivate her friendship. She will not consider an introduction necessary inasmuch as you and she work at the same place. It is also possible to meet people through the social activities in a church.

Ben Franklin and the Servant Problem

"If you would have a servant that you like, serve thyself," said Ben Franklin, whose birthday we celebrate today.

While giving voice to this wisdom, Ben went right on with his electrical experiments, and all unknowingly paved the way to the modern homemaker to serve herself with ease and simplicity. Electrical appliances such as the washer, the vacuum cleaner and the ironing machine, are the present day servants in the home.

Ben Franklin would like this new order of things because it's thrifty. Every electrical device you use means thrift of money, time and labor.

Farce, Brimming With Mirth Provoking Situations, Comes to Ceramic Theatre Next Thursday.

Referring to the comedy success, "Meet the Wife," which comes to the Ceramic here next Thursday evening, the Huntington, W. Va., Herald Dispatch says:

"Meet the Wife," developed the fact before the doubly appreciative audience at the Huntington theatre last night, that there is occasionally something new in comedy plots. It merited a capacity house.

"It is doubtful if there has ever been presented in this city a farce of such a thoroughly delightful character or one so brimming with mirth provoking situations. And the principals in the cast are fully up to every situation.

"When two husbands married to the same woman meet on common ground that which eventuates usually creates an interesting scene. None can forsee just what either will do, but here the author has taken this selfsame situation and turned it deftly into one of the most perfect vehicles of laughter imaginable.

"In commenting on this play one must pay tribute to Augusta Boylston as the twice-married and bossy wife; Donald Campbell as the browbeaten second husband and Messenger Bellis as the first husband who deserted the matrimonial craft in an earthquake for the great world of liberty.

"The story on which the play is based is clever and scintillates with exceptional situations. Husband number two stumbles, through the machinations of Fate, into the home of husband number one, directed and managed, of course by the wife of both. The men become good friends until husband number two has the bombshell of revelation exploded beneath him. He, feeling that had his predecessor not run away from friend wife, he, himself would be a free agent, glorying in the liberty he wanted but didn't have the courage to take. But the humor of the situation strikes them and they laugh it off.

"Augusta Boylston is a charming woman who has carried an undeniably wonderful personality behind the footlights and in the role of the bossy wife who insists on ruling or ruining, she keeps her audience in the throes of merriment constantly. At times one finds just a hint of suggestiveness in the situations and lines but it it such perfectly natural suggestiveness that one feels no sense of resentment—not even the most finicky.

"'Meet the Wife' is not only a delightful comedy—it is a human thing—a wonderful human thing."

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Old Enough To Decide.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young woman 24 years old. I am very unhappy. About three years ago I met a young man about my age, but I did not go with him many times as I did not care for him. Shortly after this I met another young man, two years older than I am. I am still keeping company with him and love him very much. He has asked me to marry him several times, but I didn't know what to do. My parents want me to marry the other man because he is wealthy. They have some fault to find with every young man I go with. My father told me that I could not come home if I married the second young man. But he is very kind to me. He has no bad habits. My mother would hardly know him if she saw him. Please advise me what to do. F. A. R.

At the age of 24 you are old enough to follow the dictates of your own heart. I think that three years has been quite a test of your love and since you and the young man still care for each other and want to marry now, you should not let any one stand in the way of your love. When parents are fair in their criticisms they should be heeded, but when they are unjust and unreasonable their stand in the matter should be disregarded. A girl knows in her own heart, as a rule, when her parents are fair. So often a mother and father do everything in their power to prevent their daughter's marriage to a selfish, worthless man, only to be ignored by the daughter. In the end, however, she pays dearly for her willfulness. Look into the future, my dear, and if you feel sure you have found the man you want for a life mate, marry him.

THRIFT WEEK OBSERVED HERE

Building Association and Postal Department Co-operate.

Local organizations are co-operating in the annual observance of Thrift week which began today and will close next Friday.

The Ohio Building Association League and the postoffice department aer taking part in the observance which is nation-wide in scope. Postmaster Edwin McClure has been asked to point out to the public the advantages of thrift during the present campaign and encourage the use of the postal Savings department.

The postal Savings department, of which every postoffice is a depository, differs from the ordinary savings banks. A depositor may deposit any amount from $1 to $2,500 at any time. Deposits are evidenced in non-negotiable and non-transferable certificates and draw interest at the rate of two per cent a year. Deposits are payable to the depositor upon demand at the postoffice at which the account is kept. Withdrawals may also be made by mail.

Amounts less than $1 may be saved by purchasing postal savings stamps at 10 cents each. A postal savings card with 10 savings stamps will be accepted as a deposit of $1 either in opening a new account or in adding to an existing one, or it may be redeemed in cash. Accounts may be transferred from one postoffice to another without loss of interest or without cost to the depositor.

The Ohio Building Association League, of which local building and loan associations are members, is especially interested in Thrift Day, Tuesday, January 20; Own Your Own Home Day, Wednesday, January 21, and Safe Investment Day, Friday, January 23.

For passing fads we have a failing,
Chlorine gas we're now inhaling—
Just to cure a common cold;
Enthusiasts extoll it's virtue,
Insisting that it cannot hurt you—
But nature cures 'em, as of old.

Runyon Says

Damages Due to Improper Hitting.
Dempsey Is Not Apt to Retire.
They Will Offer Too Much Money.
More Than UNDEFEATED.
Benny Leonard's Case Is Different.

By DAMON RUNYON.
(Copyright, 1925, by International Feature Service.)

JACK DEMPSEY, heavyweight champion, talks of retiring.

That is, perhaps, quite true.

But the boxing game has changed. Heretofore few champions gathered enough money to bulwark their finances stoutly enough to resist the temptation of one more 'big shot."

Nowadays provident champions can feather their nests early in their title careers. By the time they have held their titles as long as Dempsey and Leonard they should be well fixed.

The writer is not sure that if he were either Dempsey or Leonard, or any one of the other title holders who have had their titles long enough to turn them into bank accounts, he wouldn't think seriously of retiring.

In the cases of Dempsey and Leonard it is a human impulse, also largely a BUSINESS impulse.

Let us see.

Dempsey undoubtedly has enough money put aside to bring him an income of a couple hundred dollars per week as long as he lives.

That satisfies Dempsey. He has no extravagant tastes.

They both have had considerable experience on the stage and in motion picture work.

It is conceivable that as retired and undefeated champions they could both go along for years retaining something of their old drawing power, enough to add materially to the income from their investments.

It has been many years since Jack McAuliffe, light weight champion of the world, saw the shadow of YOUTH across his pugilistic path, and retired undefeated.

McAuliffe's day was long before the day of big purses. He was a great fighter, but he had little opportunity to realize on his ability anything for his old age.

But through all the years since McAuliffe's retirement that item UNDEFEATED has been a big asset to him. It has enabled him to make a living in theatrical work, and otherwise, when other former holders of that same title were having a hard struggle because they had retired only after being DEFEATED.

Perhaps the fact that McAuliffe was one of the very few retired and undefeated champions of prize ring history, therefore a novelty, made him an attraction.

Probably men who had known him in his pugilistic prime liked to see him at intervals, to muse on the halcyon days of yore, to dream dreams of their own puissant youth.

We all get that way as the years slide by.

We all like to see the figures we knew in our young, glowing days, to remark to our neighbor, "What'd he done to so-and-so when he was good?"

There's something in that word UNDEFEATED.

If Dempsey and Leonard retired now, ten years from now all of us would be looking at the lightweights and heavyweights of the day with contempt, and telling the younger generation:

"Why, Jack or Benny, would have made mincemeat of them in no time!"

If you should tell them now that Jim Jeffries, or Ad Wolgast would have made mincemeat of the current crop in the lightweight and heavy weight divisions, their answer would be that Johnson beat Jeffries, and Ritchie beat Wolgast.

Jeffries missed a great chance to become a fistic immortal by not remaining in retirement after he once retired.

They lured him forth with a fat purse. He fell before a man he might, have in his prime, have defeated. No one remembers that Jeffries was old and tired when he met Johnson. They remember only that he was DEFEATED.

Jeffries is said to be "broke." As the UNDEFEATED champion he would still have a distinct asset. As an "ex" in the world to be a novelty.

There is a limit to the common sense of retirement. The distinction UNDEFEATED will not be worth what Dempsey will get when the time comes.

Leonard's case is different. In the first place, there is the question as to whether Leonard can ever again make the lightweight poundage of 135 pounds, without completely sacrificing not only every chance of winning, but his health as well.

In the second place, Leonard cannot command the Dempsey price, or anything like it. He can get no more in a chunk than he can earn outside the ring in a few years UNDEFEATED. Once beaten, Leonard for the time being at least, loses easily 50 per cent of his present value.

Johnson could probably be making that much yearly had he retired UNDEFEATED.

He was a strong drawing card for some time after he came back to the United States and served his term in Leavenworth. Had he quit the ring as champion he would still be "packing 'em in."

His $30,000 long since has taken

Delaney Knocks Out Tiger; Offered Scrap With Greb

Uppercut in Second Round Puts Colored Boxer Out of the Running.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Kindly omit flowers.

This request of the heirs and assigns, so frequently mentioned in connection with the obsequies, was duly observed shortly after 10 o'clock last night when Flowers was omitted, excluded and otherwise discontinued by a right hand punch to the jaw from Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., after 43 seconds of fighting in the second round.

That was all there was to it—a punch, a fall, a convulsive writhe or so and as a contender for the middleweight championship of the world, Tiger Flowers, colored gentleman of Atlanta, Ga., was no more. Delaney had punctured the bubble with the rapier point of his good right hand.

The omission of flowers followed automatically. The brunette specimen was to have bet Allentown Joe Gans at Allentown, Pa., on Monday night next, but the promoters went into reverse, coincident with the knockout, and substituted Delaney.

Lifted to the watch tower of public esteem by his quick victories over several opponents and the almost theatrical ferocity of his mien, the colored gent was matched with Delaney as the final "convincer" for a shot at Harry Greb's title. Delaney will take over that end of the business also. You couldn't keep Delaney out of a championship match now with a ball and chain. Greb, it was announced, had agreed to meet the winner, previous to last night's frolic.

At the time, it was fondly expected that Flowers would be a candidate, in spite of reports that he sported a glass jaw. On the face of the returns, this allegation may or may not have been substantiated. All that I can offer on the subject is that if it isn't Dresden China, neither is it Sheffield plate.

Granting that Delaney flourishes a natty sock, the fact remains that Flowers went out too suddenly to leave an impression of adequate invulnerability. He has all the stage trappings, from the Tiger head on his bathrobe to the multi-colored bouquet on his fighting trunks. He has the snarl of the jungle cat on his lips and the swiftness of its "strike" in his arms; everything, in fact, but a competent chin. This last probably will make the omission of Flowers a more or less permanent institution.

At that, the Tiger possibly had two strikes on him at the outset. A left hander sent against a right hand puncher, he seemed to be made to measure for Delaney as they stepped out at the gong. Jack stood straight up and as he danced away from Flowers' rushes, held the negro off with a straight left. Occasionally he stopped and crossed with a right. The Tiger had no adequate reply to these tactics and took to slapping at his man as one might treat a pestiferous fly. It was Delaney's round, what there was of it.

The Tiger evidently was given fresh instructions in his corner for he came out with a rush and proceeded to mix it merrily. Swarming all over his man. This was a mistake. One might as well trade punches with a corba as to mix with Delaney. In that style of fighting, the sharp shooter always wins.

For a moment the Bridgeport entry seemed dazed by the rush; then he quickly shot over a straight right to the chin and before Flowers could blink his eyes followed with a right uppercut, flush on the "button." The colored man fell forward in a slow collapse, rolled over on his back and attempted to rise at the count of seven.

But the effort was too much and he fell back to take the rest of the count, as is.

BISONS TO MEET MARIETTA FIVE

BETHANY, W. Va., June 17—Nine Bison basketball men, their coach and manager left Bethany this morning for Marietta where they are to play the Marietta College passers tonight on the Pioneer floor. All of Coach McCandless' men are in good shape and are confident that they will be able to annex a victory from the Ohio quintet tonight.

The Bethany Freshmen will stage their first home game for this season tonight when they battle St. Anthony's passers from Steubenville in the Irvin Gym. Coach Latto will start the game with following lineup: forwards, Reese and Wailes; center, Idleman; guard, Hamilton and House.

LAUGHLINS AND TROTTERS WIN

Defeat Potters and No. 5 in Shop League Games.

Laughlin 6 and Trotters were winners in last night's "Y" industrial basketball league engagements. The No. 6 passers continued their winning streak at the expense of the Potters, 27 to 25, while the Trotters had it easy with Laughlin 5, the count being 28 to 10.

The Laughlin-Potters contest was one of the best engagements of the season, neither squad having more than a five-point edge at any occasion. The Laughlin aggregation had two points of a margin at the end of the first half, the score being 14 to 12.

The final half was fought just as heatedly as the first and the score was just as close in the closing minutes as it was in the first. Webb, Martin, Jester and Greenawalt were the star performers for Laughlin 6 while Wain, Guyton and Zuck were the mainstays of the Potters.

The Trotter outfit had little trouble to speak of in their game with Laughlin 5. They topped their rivals by the count of 10 to 3 at the end of the first half. The distance between the teams lengthened even more in the second half. Beeler, McVey, Watson and McConville did most of the heavy work for the Trotters while Berg and Manypenny performed well for the Laughlins.

PUSEY REGULAR ON KISKI QUINT

Pusey has landed a first string berth on the Kiski basketball five and from all indications he'll hold it for the remainder of the season. He has revealed all the ability which made him a big factor in many of the East Liverpool victories of recent years when he was a member of the Blue and White.

LISBON TEAMS HERE TONIGHT

Boone's Charges Confident of Victory Over County Seaters.

With little opportunity for good sound rest after their harrowing contest last night with Cambridge, which the Guernsey countains won, 22 to 20, Coach O. V. Boone's high school basketballers are expected back in East Liverpool early this afternoon.

Tonight they will go into action, facing the Lisbon school quintet on the local floor.

The game should give the locals an even break in the week-end schedule. The team, as a whole, is confident of victory.

The girls teams of the two schools will put on the preliminary, which will start at 7:15 p. m.

Coach Boone, in a recent statement, asserted that every effort will be made to start the game on the time announced.

Last Night's Fights

At Barberton, O.—Willie Ames and Al Corbett, drew, twelve rounds.

CHAMP ADMITS HE WILL MARRY

Dempsey and Screen Actress Expect to Wed June 1.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 17—Using the parlance of the squared ring where he is champion of them all, Jack Dempsey admitted again today there was no use sparring any longer and reaffirmed his announcement of yesterday that he and Estelle Taylor, silver screen actress, would be married, probably June 1. The champion frankly admitted that he and the film star are engaged and said they would be wed as soon as Miss Taylor completes her present film work.

Just where the ceremony will take place was problematical today, but according to friends close to the pair in all probability it will be at Lake Louise, in Canada.

Both Miss Taylor and Dempsey had only endearing terms to speak of each other.

Dempsey said "Miss Taylor is a most wonderful little girl and it is with pride that I admit out engagement is a fact."

The actress' comment for Dempsey was likewise endearing.

ROAMERS DOWN CHURCH PASSERS

In a well played game last night, the Roamers basketball five won from the First Presbyterian Juniors by the score of 24 to 18. Both teams were even at the end of the first half, the score being 13 to 13.

In the second half, the Roamers took the lead from their opponents and were ahead 16 to 15, at the end of the third quarter, and in the last quarter easy outplayed the Juniors.

Bloor, Lindell, Bailey and Congrove were the stars for the Roamers while Feit, Blazer and Todd performed the best of the Presbyterian Juniors. Lineup and summaries:

Roamers.		Juniors.
Bloor	F	Feit
Lindell	F	Blazer
Bailey	C	Anderson
Angus	G	Swaney
Congrove	G	Todd

Substitutions—Pierson for Lindell, Carmen for Congrove, Witherow for Blazer.

Foul Goals—Congrove 2, Pierson, Bloor, Feit 2, Blazer, Anderson.

CAMBRIDGE, Jan. 17.—Cambridge high school passers defeated East Liverpool's scholastic five, 22 to 20, last night in a nerve shattering contest that shadowed any contest of a similar nature seen here in recent years.

The Ceramic City aggregation, living up to advance notices, played the finest brand of basketball witnessed on the local court this year.

The visitors were strong at the outset, jumping into the lead and holding it until the end of the first quarter when the count stood 12 to 7.

The second period was waged on nearly equal terms, with the Cambridge lads climbing a few notches in the race.

In the third period, the Cambridge defense, which had been slow in getting into action at the start of the game, tightened and held up the East Liverpool advance while the Cambridge forwards launched an assault upon the East Liverpool baskets which was highly effective. At the end of the quarter the Cambridge quint was leading, 18 to 17.

The record breaking crowd of fans were on thei rfeet through the final period as the two teams fought for supremacy. A single field goal gave the Cambridge boys victory as the game ended.

The lineup:

Pusey	F	Hinton
English	F	Knox
McGraw	C	Grant
Liebschner	G	Schaffer
McConville	G	Cesner

Substitutions—Allison for Liebschner, Hamilton for Allison.

Referee—Dunlap (Denison).

Proposes Elimination Bouts.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Tex Rickard declared his intention today of applying to the state Athletic commission for permission to award a championship belt to the winner of the bout between Sammy Mandell and Sid Terris at Madison Square Garden on February 6, as the first step in determining the successor to Benny Leonard, retiring lightweight champion. The Mandell-Terris bout would be the forerunner, he said, of a series of elimination meetings, such as was conducted recently in the featherweight division. He added that the championship belt could be passed along from winner to winner, as they developed.

No Better Material In Any Car at Any Price

The sturdy qualities that make the good Maxwell so durable and dependable are the natural results of materials and methods of manufacture usually associated with cars of far higher price.

There are approximately 38 fast wearing parts in all automobiles. Irrespective of price there is nothing superior to the good Maxwell at those 38 points.

More expensive alloy steels are used in the good Maxwell than in many cars selling for twice or thrice as much.

Furthermore, the group of engineers who share credit for the advancement and perfection of the good Maxwell—the same group that designed the Chrysler Six—has practically eliminated all vibration. This is a refinement of operation hitherto assumed to be impossible with a four-cylinder car.

Every penny you invest in the good Maxwell will work for you overtime. It is apparent from the testimony of its owners that it is actually a better car than anything at anywhere near its price.

We are pleased to extend the convenience of time-payments. Ask about Maxwell's attractive plan.

Runyon Says

Damages Due to Improper Hitting.
Dempsey Is Not Apt to Retire.
They Will Offer Too Much Money.
More Than UNDEFEATED.
Benny Leonard's Case Is Different.

By DAMON RUNYON.
(Copyright, 1925, by International Feature Service.)

JACK DEMPSEY, heavyweight champion, talks of retiring.

Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, talks of retiring.

That is, perhaps, quite true.

But the boxing game has changed. Heretofore few champions gathered enough money to bulwark their finances stoutly enough to resist the temptation of one more 'big shot."

Nowadays provident champions can feather their nests early in their title careers. By the time they have held their titles as long as Dempsey and Leonard they should be well fixed.

The writer is not sure that if he were either Dempsey or Leonard, or any one of the other title holders who have had their titles long enough to turn them into bank accounts, he wouldn't think seriously of retiring.

In the cases of Dempsey and Leonard it is a human impulse, also largely a BUSINESS impulse.

Let us see.

Dempsey undoubtedly has enough money put aside to bring him an income of a couple hundred dollars per week as long as he lives.

That satisfies Dempsey. He has no extravagant tastes.

They both have had considerable experience on the stage and in motion picture work.

It is conceivable that as retired and undefeated champions they could both go along for years retaining something of their old drawing power, enough to add materially to the income from their investments.

It has been many years since Jack McAuliffe, light weight champion of the world, saw the shadow of YOUTH across his pugilistic path, and retired undefeated.

McAuliffe's day was long before the day of big purses. He was a great fighter, but he had little opportunity to realize on his ability anything for his old age.

But through all the years since McAuliffe's retirement that item UNDEFEATED has been a big asset to him. It has enabled him to make a living in theatrical work, and otherwise, when other former holders of that same title were having a hard struggle because they had retired only after being DEFEATED.

Perhaps the fact that McAuliffe was one of the very few retired and undefeated champions of prize ring history, therefore a novelty, made him an attraction.

Probably men who had known him in his pugilistic prime liked to see him at intervals, to muse on the halcyon days of yore, to dream dreams of their own puissant youth.

We all get that way as the years slide by.

We all like to see the figures we knew in our young, glowing days, to remark to our neighbor, "What'd he done to so-and-so when he was good?"

There's something in that word UNDEFEATED.

If Dempsey and Leonard retired now, ten years from now all of us would be looking at the lightweights and heavyweights of the day with contempt, and telling the younger generation:

"Why, Jack or Benny, would have made mincemeat of them in no time!"

If you should tell them now that Jim Jeffries, or Ad Wolgast would have made mincemeat of the current crop in the lightweight and heavy weight divisions, their answer would be that Johnson beat Jeffries, and Ritchie beat Wolgast.

Jeffries missed a great chance to become a fistic immortal by not remaining in retirement after he once retired.

They lured him forth with a fat purse. He fell before a man he might, have in his prime, have defeated. No one remembers that Jeffries was old and tired when he met Johnson. They remember only that he was DEFEATED.

Jeffries is said to be "broke." As the UNDEFEATED champion he would still have a distinct asset. As an "ex" in the world to be a novelty.

There is a limit to the common sense of retirement. The distinction UNDEFEATED will not be worth what Dempsey will get when the time comes.

Leonard's case is different. In the first place, there is the question as to whether Leonard can ever again make the lightweight poundage of 135 pounds, without completely sacrificing not only every chance of winning, but his health as well.

In the second place, Leonard cannot command the Dempsey price, or anything like it. He can get no more in a chunk than he can earn outside the ring in a few years UNDEFEATED. Once beaten, Leonard for the time being at least, loses easily 50 per cent of his present value.

Johnson could probably be making that much yearly had he retired UNDEFEATED.

He was a strong drawing card for some time after he came back to the United States and served his term in Leavenworth. Had he quit the ring as champion he would still be "packing 'em in."

His $20,000 long since has taken

Delaney Knocks Out Tiger; Offered Scrap With Greb

Uppercut in Second Round Puts Colored Boxer Out of the Running.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Kindly omit flowers.

This request of the heirs and assigns, so frequently mentioned in connection with the obsequies, was duly observed shortly after 10 o'clock last night when Flowers was omitted, excluded and otherwise discontinued by a right hand punch to the jaw from Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., after 42 seconds of fighting in the second round.

That was all there was to it—a punch, a fall, a convulsive writhe or so and as a contender for the middleweight championship of the world, Tiger Flowers, colored gentleman of Atlanta, Ga., was no more. Delaney had punctured the bubble with the rapier point of his good right hand.

The omission of flowers followed automatically. The brunette specimen was to have bet Allentown Joe Gans at Allentown, Pa., on Monday night next, but the promoters went into reverse, coincident with the knockout, and substituted Delaney.

Lifted to the watch tower of public esteem by his quick victories over several opponents and the almost theatrical ferocity of his mien, the colored gent was matched with Delaney as the final "convincer" for a shot at Harry Greb's title. Delaney will take over that end of the business also. You couldn't keep Delaney out of a championship match now with a ball and chain. Greb, it was announced, had agreed to meet the winner, previous to last night's frolic.

At the time, it was fondly expected that Flowers would be a candidate, in spite of reports that he sported a glass jaw. On the face of the returns, this allegation may or may not have been substantiated. All that I can offer on the subject is that if it isn't Dresden China, neither is it Sheffield plate.

Granting that Delaney flourishes a natty sock, the fact remains that Flowers went out too suddenly to leave an impression of adequate invulnerability. He has all the stage trappings, from the Tiger head on his bathrobe to the multi-colored bouquet on his fighting trunks. He has the snarl of the jungle cat on his lips and the swiftness of its "strike" in his arms; everything, in fact, but a competent chin. This last probably will make the omission of Flowers a more or less permanent institution.

At that, the Tiger possibly had two strikes on him at the outset. A left hander sent against a right hand puncher, he seemed to be made to measure for Delaney as they stepped out at the gong. Jack stood straight up and as he danced away from Flowers' rushes, held the negro off with a straight left. Occasionally he stopped and crossed with a right. The Tiger had no adequate reply to these tactics and took to slapping at his man as one might treat a pestiferous fly. It was Delaney's round, what there was of it.

The Tiger evidently was given fresh instructions in his corner for he came out with a rush and proceeded to mix it merrily. Swarming all over his man. This was a mistake. One might as well trade punches with a corba as to mix with Delaney. In that style of fighting, the sharp shooter always wins.

For a moment the Bridgeport entry seemed dazed by the rush; then he quickly shot over a straight right to the chin and before Flowers could blink his eyes followed with a right uppercut, flush on the "button." The colored man fell forward in a slow collapse, rolled over on his back and attempted to rise at the count of seven.

But the effort was too much and he fell back to take the rest of the count, as is.

BISONS TO MEET MARIETTA FIVE

BETHANY, W. Va., June 17—Nine Bison basketball men, their coach and manager left Bethany this morning for Marietta where they are to play the Marietta College passers tonight on the Pioneer floor. All of Coach McCandless' men are in good shape and are confident that they will be able to annex a victory from the Ohio quintet tonight.

The Bethany Freshmen will stage their first home game for this season tonight when they battle St. Anthony's passers from Steubenville in the Irvin Gym. Coach Latto will start the game with following lineup: forwards, Reese and Wailes; center, Idleman; guard, Hamilton and House.

LAUGHLINS AND TROTTERS WIN

Defeat Potters and No. 5 in Shop League Games.

Laughlin 6 and Trotters were winners in last night's "Y" industrial basketball league engagements. The No. 6 passers continued their winning streak at the expense of the Potters, 27 to 25, while the Trotters had it easy with Laughlin 5, the count being 28 to 10.

The Laughlin-Potters contest was one of the best engagements of the season, neither squad having more than a five-point edge at any occasion. The Laughlin aggregation had two points of a margin at the end of the first half, the score being 14 to 12.

The final half was fought just as heatedly as the first and the score was just as close in the closing minutes as it was in the first. Webb, Martin, Jester and Greenawalt were the star performers for Laughlin 6 while Wain, Guyton and Zuck were the mainstays of the Potters.

The Trotter outfit had little trouble to speak of in their game with Laughlin 5. They topped their rivals by the count of 10 to 3 at the end of the first half. The distance between the teams lengthened even more in the second half. Beeler, McVey, Watson and McConville did most of the heavy work for the Trotters while Berg and Manypenny performed well for the Laughlins.

Webb	F	Wain
Martin	F	Ward
Jester	C	Guyton
Greenwalt	G	Wallace
Salsberry	G	Zuck

PUSEY REGULAR ON KISKI QUINT

"Bob" Pusey, former East Liverpool high school athlete, is making the athletic grade at Kiski.

Pusey has landed a first string berth on the Kiski basketball five and from all indications he'll hold it for the remainder of the season. He has revealed all the ability which made him a big factor in many of the East Liverpool victories of recent years when he was a member of the Blue and White.

LISBON TEAMS HERE TONIGHT

Boone's Charges Confident of Victory Over County Seaters.

With little opportunity for good sound rest after their harrowing contest last night with Cambridge, which the Guernsey countains won, 22 to 20, Coach O. V. Boone's high school basketballers are expected back in East Liverpool early this afternoon.

Tonight they will go into action, facing the Lisbon school quintet on the local floor.

The game should give the locals an even break in the week-end schedule. The team, as a whole, is confident of victory.

The girls teams of the two schools will put on the preliminary, which will start at 7:15 p. m.

Coach Boone, in a recent statement, asserted that every effort will be made to start the game on the time announced.

Last Night's Fights

At Barberton, O.—Willie Ames and Al Corbett, drew, twelve rounds.

CHAMP ADMITS HE WILL MARRY

Dempsey and Screen Actress Expect to Wed June 1.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 17—Using the parlance of the squared ring where he is champion of them all, Jack Dempsey admitted again today there was no use sparring any longer and reaffirmed his announcement of yesterday that he and Estelle Taylor, silver screen actress, would be married, probably June 1. The champion frankly admitted that he and the film star are engaged and said they would be wed as soon as Miss Taylor completes her present film work.

Just where the ceremony will take place was problematical today, but according to friends close to the pair in all probability it will be at Lake Louise, in Canada.

Both Miss Taylor and Dempsey had only endearing terms to speak of each other.

Dempsey said "Miss Taylor is a most wonderful little girl and it is with pride that I admit out engagement is a fact."

The actress' comment for Dempsey was likewise endearing.

ROAMERS DOWN CHURCH PASSERS

In a well played game last night, the Roamers basketball five won from the First Presbyterian Juniors by the score of 24 to 18. Both teams were even at the end of the first half, the score being 13 to 13.

In the second half, the Roamers took the lead from their opponents and were ahead 16 to 15, at the end of the third quarter, and in the last quarter easy outplayed the Juniors.

Bloor, Lindell, Bailey and Congrove were the stars for the Roamers while Feit, Blazer and Todd performed the best of the Presbyterian Juniors. Lineup and summaries:

Roamers.		Juniors.
Blo.	F.	Feit
Lindell	F.	Blazer

Referee—McConville.

CAMBRIDGE, Jan. 17.—Cambridge high school passers defeated East Liverpool's scholastic five, 22 to 20, last night in a nerve shattering contest that shadowed any contest of a similar nature seen here in recent years.

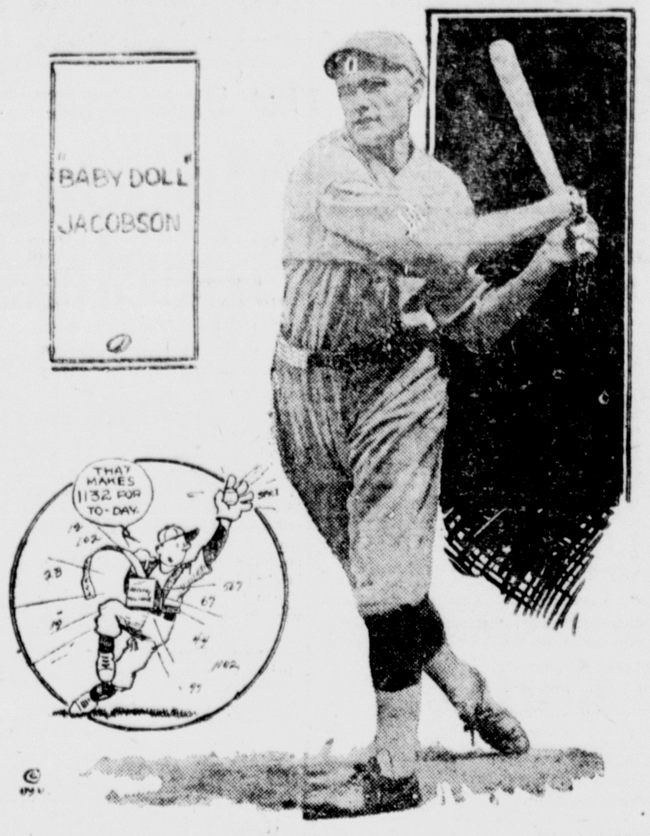
This "Baby Doll" Gets 'Em



Big Bill Jacobson, 200 pounds and more firm than fast afoot, bears the title of "Baby Doll," because he is far from one. But none of these things kept him from setting a major league record for outfielders in putouts last year for the Browns. And he is waiting to better that mark next season.

CHICAGO HAILS PAAVO NURMI

Finn Adds Another Scalp to Belt; Returns to New York.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—Chicago today hailed a new champion—Paavo Nurmi who last night on the Coliseum track added another scalp to his already well laden belt.

Nurmi ran, or rather ambled 12 miles in the special feature of the I. A. C. sport carnival one fifth of a second better than he had legged the same distance in New York, on Thursday night.

The Finn turned the one and one quarter miles in 5-354-5 and the one and one half in 6:444-5, his record work being done in the last half mile. 'Tis time for the mile, 4:26.

Joie Ray ran, too, but he was 85 yards behind the famous Nurim at the finish. Joie gave everything he had but was no competition to the flying Haddie.

Nurmi took the track after a day and night ride on the train from New York. He shook hands with Ray, stood erect and kept that posture throughout the race. Head up, chest out, knee caps that looked like baseballs, out too.

made more money than any fighter in the history of the ring.

This does not take account of his earnings as champion, you understand. It includes only what he has made, with his pugilistic reputation figuring in the matter.

To his reputation as ex-champion, it is true that Corbett has added much of his ability as an actor. But, even so, the public memory of his pugilistic prowess remains an important factor in his drawing power.

Would that power, in Corbett's case, have been any greater had Corbett retired undefeated?

The writer thinks so.

The discovery may aid materially in increasing accuracy of long-range weather forecasts, he believes.

W. VA. MATMEN OPEN TONIGHT

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Jan. 17.—West Virginia University will begin its fifth season of intercollegiate wrestling at the "Ark" here this evening when Mountaineer matmen go against grapplers representing Western Maryland college of Westminster, Md.

Coach Hall is bringing a veteran squad here for the match and the Mountaineers are not expected to make a sweep of the bouts as they did in winning 25-0 last year.

Most every one looks for Farmer to be West Virginia's 115-pound man with either Stickler or "Red" Meade meeting Rawlings, of Western Maryland, in the 125.

In the 135-pound division West Virginia will have its ace, Al Millender, who has not been defeated in a collegiate bout since his first appearance on the mat in 1923. After losing his first start Millender went on the warpath and in the matches that have followed he has been a consistent winner on falls.

Ward Wylie, another veteran, will probably oppose the Maryland star, Tozzie, who was captain of the team last year. Either Captain Sudor or Hobansack, the latter a football man, will be Harrick's choice for 158-pound duty. The light heavyweight berth is still open, according to reports. Ezra Pitsenberger, 175-pound star for several seasons, will be used in the unlimited class.

"BIG LEAGUE" GOLFERS PLAY

Florida Professional Loop Gets Under Way.

By ROBERT E. BARLOW.

PASADENA, ON THE GULF, Fla., Jan. 17—Big league golf got away to a flying start today when for the first time in the history of the game two teams of crack golfers met in the first game of the Florida professional golf league.

Walter Hagen and Joe Kirkwood, Pasadena, world famous pair, were opposed by Gene Sarazen and Leo Diegel, Hollywood, in an 18-hole match over the course of the Boca Ciega golf and country club links here. It was fitting that Hagen, long the dominant figure in international professional golf, should be included in the first big league game in golf.

Hagen and Kirkwood played the last nine at Boca Ciega in 33 strokes each, with every putt holed as their last workout for today's game and Sarazen and Diegel went over the course this morning and found it a championship test of golf in every way.

League officials announced today that the second game would be played at Tampa tomorrow when the Hollywood pair will play Johnny Farrell and Bobby Cruikshank, the fast Tampa team. The complete league schedule will be announced next week. Each team will play a home game with each team.

The following teams are members: Orlando has made an offer to MacDonald Smith and in the event of being able to get a team fast enough to compete with the other teams, will be admitted.

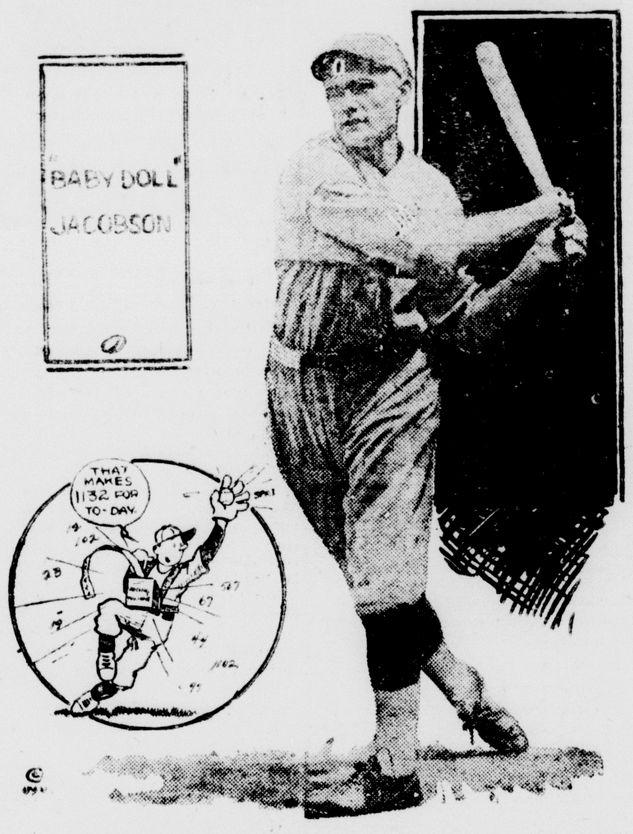
This "Baby Doll" Gets 'Em



Big Bill Jacobson, 200 pounds and more firm than fast afoot, bears the title of "Baby Doll," because he is far from one. But none of these things kept him from setting a major league record for outfielders in putouts last year for the Browns. And he is waiting to better that mark next season.

CHICAGO HAILS PAAVO NURMI

Finn Adds Another Scalp to Belt; Returns to New York.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—Chicago today hailed a new champion—Paavo Nurmi who last night on the Coliseum track added another scalp to his already well laden belt.

Nurmi ran, or rather ambled 15 miles in the special feature of the I. A. C. sport carnival one fifth of a second better than he had legged the same distance in New York, on Thursday night.

The Finn turned the one and one quarter miles in 5-354-5 and the one and one half in 6:444-5, his record work being done in the last half mile. 'Tis time for the mile, 4:26.

Joie Ray ran, too, but he was 85 yards behind the famous Nurmi at the finish. Joie gave everything he had but was no competition to the flying Haddie.

Nurmi took the track after a day and night ride on the train from New York. He shook hands with Ray, stood erect and kept that posture throughout the race. Head up, chest out, knee caps that looked like baseballs, out too.

After the race, Nurmi ran for a train, made it and after another day and night ride expects to hang up some more track records in New York tonight.

Runyon Says:

In the twenty-seven years since he lost the title Corbett has probably wings. "Lil' Artha" probably hasn't much to show for it.

Only one man has made any considerable money as an "ex" on the strength of his old reputation.

That man is James J. Corbett. made more money than any fighter in the history of the ring.

This does not take account of his earnings as champion, you understand. It includes only what he has made, with his pugilistic reputation figuring in the matter.

To his reputation as ex-champion, it is true that Corbett has added much of his ability as an actor. But, even so, the public memory of his pugilistic prowess remains an important factor in his drawing power.

Would that power, in Corbett's case, have been any greater had Corbett retired undefeated?

The writer thinks so.

Rings on Trees Bear Definite Relation to Amount of Rainfall

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan.—There is a definite relation between the annual rings on trees and the amount of rainfall, according to Dr. A. E. Douglass, director of the Steward Observatory here. During observations over a period of twenty years, Dr. Douglass worked out the probable variations of the sun in the last four or five centuries. The discovery may aid materially in increasing accuracy of long-range weather forecasts, he believes.

W. VA. MATMEN OPEN TONIGHT

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Jan. 17.—West Virginia University will begin its fifth season of intercollegiate wrestling at the "Ark" here this evening when Mountaineer matmen go against grapplers representing Western Maryland college of Westminster, Md.

Coach Hall is bringing a veteran squad here for the match and the Mountaineers are not expected to make a sweep of the bouts as they did in winning 25-0 last year.

Most every one looks for Farmer to be West Virginia's 115-pound man with either Stickler or "Red" Meade meeting Rawlings, of Western Maryland, in the 115.

In the 135-pound division West Virginia will have its ace, Al Millender, who has not been defeated in a collegiate bout since his first appearance on the mat in 1923. After losing his first start Millender went on the warpath and in the matches that have followed he has been a consistent winner on falls.

Ward Wylie, another veteran, will probably oppose the Maryland star, Tozzie, who was captain of the team last year. Either Captain Sudor or Hobansack, the latter a football man will be Harrick's choice for 158-pound duty. The light heavyweight berth is still open, according to reports. Ezra Pitsenberger, 175-pound star for several seasons, will be used in the unlimited class.

"BIG LEAGUE" GOLFERS PLAY

Florida Professional Loop Gets Under Way.

By ROBERT E. BARLOW.

PASADENA, ON THE GULF, Fla., Jan. 17—Big league golf got away to a flying start today when for the first time in the history of the game two teams of crack golfers met in the first game of the Florida professional golf league.

Walter Hagen and Joe Kirkwood, Pasadena, world famous pair, were opposed by Gene Sarazen and Leo Diegel, Hollywood, in an 18-hole match over the course of the Boca Ciega golf and country club links here. It was fitting that Hagen, long the dominant figure in international professional golf, should be included in the first big league game in golf.

Hagen and Kirkwood played the last nine at Boca Ciega in 33 strokes each, with every putt holed as their last workout for today's game and Sarazen and Diegel went over the course this morning and found it a championship test of golf in every way.

League officials announced today that the second game would be played at Tampa tomorrow when the Hollywood pair will play Johnny Farrell and Bobby Cruikshank, the fast Tampa team. The complete league schedule will be announced next week. Each team will play a home game with each team.

The following teams are members: Orlando has made an offer to MacDonald Smith and in the event of being able to get a team fast enough to compete with the other teams will be admitted.

REVIVAL MEETS CONTINUE HERE

Evangelist R. G. Wilkin Speaks at Oakland Church.

Evangelist R. G. Wilkin of Freeport, Ill.; spoke to another large audience last evening at the Oakland Free Methodist church. His subject was "The Convictive Ministry of the Comforter." It was based on the story of Abraham's servant traveling from Caanan to Mesopotamia in search of a wife for Isaac.

He spoke in part as follows:

"God has sent forth the Holy Spirit into the world to call out the church, the bride of Christ. He makes his appeal to the human heart as Abraham's servant asked Rebecca for a dring of water. She consented to the request by saying, "Drink my Lord." Happy the one that yields to the wooing voice. The next moment the vital test comes in the question, "Will You Go With This Man?" They start across the great Syrian desert, a type of the earthly experience of the Christian. So the Holy Spirit will guide the yielded and obedient disciple until at the close of life's day he shall meet his divine Isaac, the Lord Jesus Christ."

PASTOR TO PREACH SPECIAL SERMON

Rev. W. C. Stokes, pastor of the Pennsylvania Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, will preach the first of a special series of sermons tomorrow evening. His subject will be: "The Kind of a Revival This Church Needs." The colored jubilee singers will have a part in the program. Philip Pryor will render several vocal solos.

Rev. Harry G. Kaye will speak at the services tomorrow in the Pennsylvania Avenue Church of Christ where he is conducting revival meetings. Evangelist R. G. Wilkin of Freeport, Ill., will preach in the Oakland Free Methodist church. Pastors will be in charge of the services at the other churches of this section of the city.

Revival Meetings.

Rev. Storey, who is conducting revival meetings at the Second Baptist church, will deliver a special sermon tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. It will be for men and women.

Legislation Framed.

Beaver county legislators will leave tomorrow for Harrisburg where the regular sessions will open Monday. Number of bills have been framed by members for presentation to the gentral assembly dealing with matters of vital interest to the county.

Industrial Accidents Many.

James J. Davis, secretary of labor, says that while accurate statistics on industrial accidents are very difficult to obtain, it is a fair estimate that there are 2,453,418 industrial accidents of all kinds annually. The resulting wage loss is over a billion dollars, he estimates. The Department of Labor may undertake research work to classify and compile more accurate information if authority is granted.

When it was intimated that women medical students might be barred from St. Mary's Hospital in London recently, women of the city rose in protest and won their demands.

Haitian Labor Cheap

Unskilled labor in Haitian cities is comparatively cheap, the most common callings paying about 20 cents per day. Shoemakers, wood workers, tailors and similar craftsmen make $5 to $25 a month, while bank employes earn $70 a month. Administrative employes get $50 to $100 monthly, and domestic servants $3 to $6 monthly, cooks getting a few dollars higher pay. On the other hand the common laborer in Haiti can feed himself for about ten cents a day.

EAST END

REVIVAL MEETS CONTINUE HERE

Evangelist R. G. Wilkin Speaks at Oakland Church.

Evangelist R. G. Wilkin of Freeport, Ill., spoke to another large audience last evening at the Oakland Free Methodist church. His subject was "The Convictive Ministry of the Comforter." It was based on the story of Abraham's servant traveling from Caanan to Mesopotamia in search of a wife for Isaac.

He spoke in part as follows:

"God has sent forth the Holy Spirit into the world to call out the church, the bride of Christ. He makes his appeal to the human heart as Abraham's servant asked Rebecca for a dring of water. She consented to the request by saying, "Drink my Lord." Happy the one that yields to the wooing voice. The next moment the vital test comes in the question, "Will You Go With This Man?" They start across the great Syrian desert, a type of the earthly experience of the Christian. So the Holy Spirit will guide the yielded and obedient disciple until at the close of life's day he shall meet his divine Isaac, the Lord Jesus Christ."

PASTOR TO PREACH SPECIAL SERMON

Rev. W. C. Stokes, pastor of the Pennsylvania Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, will preach the first of a special series of sermons tomorrow evening. His subject will be: "The Kind of a Revival This Church Needs." The colored jubilee singers will have a part in the program. Philip Pryor will render several vocal solos.

Rev. Harry G. Kaye will speak at the services tomorrow in the Pennsylvania Avenue Church of Christ where he is conducting revival meetings. Evangelist R. G. Wilkin of Freeport, Ill., will preach in the Oakland Free Methodist church. Pastors will be in charge of the services at the other churches of this section of the city.

Revival Meetings.

Rev. Storey, who is conducting revival meetings at the Second Baptist church, will deliver a special sermon tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. It will be for men and women.

Legislation Framed.

Beaver county legislators will leave tomorrow for Harrisburg where the regular sessions will open Monday. Number of bills have been framed by members for presentation to the gentral assembly dealing with matters of vital interest to the county.

Industrial Accidents Many.

James J. Davis, secretary of labor, says that while accurate statistics on industrial accidents are very difficult to obtain, it is a fair estimate that there are 2,453,418 industrial accidents of all kinds annually. The resulting wage loss is over a billion dollars, he estimates. The Department of Labor may undertake research work to classify and compile more accurate information if authority is granted.

When it was intimated that women medical students might be barred from St. Mary's Hospital in London recently, women of the city rose in protest and won their demands.

Women, Risen From Ranks, Have Important Jobs

There are a number of women in Washington today who have risen, by ability and hard work to important government positions. Once a week they meet at luncheon and discuss the problems of the government and "interlocking" subjects pertaining to their work. Above, left to right, are: Miss Lucy Minnegorode, head of the public health service nursing staff; Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the children's bureau of the department of labor; Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the woman's bureau of the same department; Major Julia Stimson, chief of the army nurse corps. Second row, left, Mrs. Clara Sears Taylor, rents commission; right, Mrs. Helen Hamilton Gardener, civil service commission. Below, Miss Lucile Atcherson, foreign service; Mrs. Mina Van Winkle, chief of the Washington policewomen; Judge Katherine Sellers of the juvenile court.
